FROM WASHINGTON.

Appointment of a Special Minister to New-Granada.

The Attitude of our Government towards Nicaragua.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Friday, Nov. 28.

The President has decided to appoint Mr. CHASE of Louisiana, Special Minister to New-Granada, and that gentleman accepts. His instructions are preparing, and he will leave for Aspinwall next week. It is suggested that the steamer Wabash might convey him from Aspinwall to Carthagena. This is very desirable, as it will not only save valuable time, but give dignity and consequence to his mission in the eyes of New-Granada. At best, it will take nearly a month to reach Bogota from New-York.

Among the claims against New-Granada which make up the sum of a million dollars, heretofore announced, is a large claim of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, for the head-tax upon passengers paid for eight years under protest, and claimed to be in violation of treaty stipulations.

If the President refuses to continue the recognition of the Walker Government, it is announced that DOUGLAS, CASS, and other "manifest destiny" men will oppose and defeat the confirmation of the recent treaty with Great Britain, relative to Central America. Our Government has recognized the new Government of Nicaragua, not only by receiving VIJIL and HERAN, but also by a dispatch from Secretary MARCY, relative to a circular of the European Powers on the rights of neutral vessels and privateering, to which Nicaragua replied, fully indorsing Mr. MARCY's position on these points. There is an evident determination to kickup a general row with the President as soon as Congress meets, if he fails to receive FERRER.

The Executive has determined to order the U. S. steamer Massachusetts to proceed to the islands of the American Guano Company, and report upon their location, harborage, &c. S.

Curious Attitude of our Government Toward the Walker Government in Nicaragua.

Special Correspondence of the N. Y. Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Nov. 27, 1856.

I have devoted much time during the last few days to inquiry as to the present attitude and disposition of our Government toward the Walker Government of Nicaragua. It is exceedingly difficult to learn anything definite upon the subject, for the reason that Minister WHEELER, who is here, is remarkably secretive in regard to the whole affair, and the members of the Administration provokingly uncommitted at all points. From other sources, however, I am able to glean a few facts, which, together with others which can be safely inferred from negative indications, present a case, the accuracy of which I am quite satisfied future developments will vindicate.

To begin: Messrs. MARCY and CUSHING are in excellent spirits. As I suggested a day or two since, the Cabinet has been united on all questions of foreign policy ever long. The Premier and Attorney-General were always opposed to giving the Walker-Rivas Government of Nicaragua any countenance whatever. For a time they succeeded in keeping JEFFERSON DAVIS at bay, and in restraining the President; but finally they were overpowered, and Padre VIJIL was received. This was prior to the Cincinnati Convention, at which PIERCE needed, and desired to secure, the "manifest destiny" support. MARCY was so unyielding, however, in his opposition to VIJIL, and treated him with such marked reserve, that he soon left the country, seriously afflicted with a Marcy chill. Even the President, having propitiated the fillibuster influence by receiving the Minister, left him shivering out in the cold,—evidently feeling all the while that however necessary as a stroke of personal policy, the public policy of recognizing the Walker-Rivas Government was bad.

VIJIL having left in disgust, Major JOHN P. HEISS was officially recognized by the President as Acting Minister of Nicaragua; but the records of the Department show that, beyond this act of formality, his very existence as an official has been ignored. Still, before the world, the United States stand as the friend and ally of Nicaragua, represented by the Revolutionary Government existing there. True, APPLETON OAKSMITH has not been received, though appointed regularly to succeed VIJIL and relieve HEISS. But why not? I have been unable to obtain any satisfactory reason therefor. Certainly no official step has been taken withdrawing PIERCE's recognition of the Nicaraguan Government? Why then not receive OAKSMITH? PIERCE's vacillation in this matter betrays his innate conviction that MARCY and CUSHING were right from the beginning; and now, without the courage either to go forward boldly and play out the game he commenced, or to confess his error and seek to retrieve it, he stands with thumb in mouth, a perfect picture of stupidity. While matters are in this plight, out come the astounding disclosures of Señor GOICOURIA, which seem to vindicate and justify entirely the opposition of the Secretary of State and Attorney-General. Why shouldn't MARCY and CUSHING be happy?

But what is to be done now? If you can answer that query to the satisfaction of President PIERCE, you will confer a never-to-be-forgotten favor, and relieve him from a most perplexing quandary. Troubles never come singly; and here comes Don FERMIN FERRER, a gentleman of education, intelligence and wealth, as still another Minister from the Walker Government of Nicaragua. What's to be done now? Will he be received? The President says No, in Cabinet council, but don't say a word out-doors. Why? That's easier asked than answered. Have diplomatic relations with Nicaragua been suspended? Certainly not in the usual form. WHEELER asked permission to come home on sick leave of absence; and really he seems to have needed it, for he is so much broken down and changed in personal appearance from the effects of the climate of Nicaragua, that I passed him repeatedly upon the avenue without recognizing him until pointed out by a friend. Some say he was recalled, and that so diplomatic relations were suspended. But that is not the usual way of breaking off diplomatic relations; besides, Mr. WHEELER was not instructed to and did not demand his passports from WALKER. It will be found, whenever the correspondence is published, that WHEELER's letter of recall was a cunningly-framed document, which might be construed in any one of half a dozen different ways, and that having been got home by it, he will not be permitted to return to his post; nor is it likely that any Minister will be sent there at present. Mr. WHEELER has the entire confidence of the President and Mr. DOBBIN, who will doubtless see that he is not placed in a false position, whatever they may determine to do as regards WALKER. The story that the Secretary of Legation at Bogota will be sent to Nicaragua, is put at rest by the fact that there is no Secretary of Legation there. Equally silly is the statement that a Minister is to be sent to Guatemala to negotiate with CABANAS for the annihilation of WALKER.

In the meantime a strong pressure is being brought to bear upon FRANCIS to induce him to receive Don FERMIN FERRER, who will hardly present himself unless of being received. What will be the result in case he does, is a question the President himself. The chances are that he will go by to stand right still in the bog in which he finds himself, until the fog raises a little and he can see his way out rather better than at present. Meantime, there is now in this city an Envoy Extraordinary from WALKER on his way to London on a secret mission, who has received semi-official information, since his arrival, that the British Government will receive him with open arms, and go fully recognize the Government de facto of Nicaragua. The fact that WALKER designs a confederacy independent of the United States, and not annexation, will doubtless aid him much with PALMERSTON.

I learn that Gen. HERAN, the Minister of New-Granada, retired from his last interview with Mr. MARCY in no very amiable mood. The reason of his displeasure has not transpired; but it is attributed to disappointment at the amount of claims for indemnity which Mr. MARCY assured him he should press against New-Granada.

ARREST OF ALLEGED SLAVE-TRADERS—THE INDIA RUBBER CAR-SPRING CASE—DEATH OF REV. DR. PEABODY—MR. BURLINGAME.

BOSTON, Friday, Nov. 28.

Messrs. JOAQUIN, NEGRET, and DE MENA, the latter a well-known cigar dealer of this city, have been arrested and held to bail in the sum of five and ten thousand dollars respectively, on charges of having been engaged in the Slave-trade. They will be examined before Commissioner WOODBURY, on Monday next.

The allegations upon which the arrests were made are not shown. NEGRET was apparently taken for DA COSTA, who recently escaped from prosecution in New-York for slave-trading, but it appears he is not DA COSTA. The belief is that NEGRET is insane.

The United States Circuit Court, Massachusetts District, has granted an injunction against THOS. W. WARDE, car-builder, of Springfield, restraining him from issuing or selling any vulcanized India Rubber Car-Springs. This injunction was asked for by the New-England Car-Spring Company to prevent the making, using, or selling the vulcanized Rubber Car-Springs made by the Union India Rubber Company of New-York, it being an infringement of the patents owned only by the New-England Car-Spring Company.

Rev. EPHRAIM PEABODY, D. D., Minister of Kings Chapel, died to-day, aged 49 years.

Mr. BURLINGAME, although still in very feeble health, left here this afternoon for Washington, to attend to his Congressional duties.

Commissioners of Deeds.

Some of the wheels of Municipal legislation move slowly at the City Hall: After nearly one year's toil, the Common Council, a few day's since, agreed upon a list of Commissioners of Deeds, and sent the resolution in for signature, to His Honor, the Mayor. His Honor still retains the document, but the legal limit of delay will expire now in about a week, when he must return it signed, or with his objections. Scores of applicants who were not "counted in" by the two Boards, now besiege His Honor daily, praying him to veto the resolution. Meantime, as many more are clamorous to have their names retained; and between the importunities of the two parties, the Mayor is in a quandary. The number of appointments to be made is about 150, and the value of a Commissionership is from $25 to $600 per annum. It is said there have been from one to two thousand applicants.

NICARAGUA.

An Important Appeal to the South for Emigrants—Interesting Description of the Country—Letter from an Officer of the Government.

From the Frankfort (Ky.) Commonwealth.

The following letter was handed to us by Gov. MOREHEAD, at the request of the writer, who was formerly a citizen of Franklin County. He desires that his letter should be published in Kentucky, and as it may be of interest to some of our citizens, we give it a place in our paper, without, however, indorsing any of the sentiments which it expresses. It is a rich specimen of filibuster philanthropy and philosophy. Any of our readers who may desire to purchase a coffee estate, will do well to call at this office and examine the list of confiscated property of the aborigines (i. e., the native born citizens) of Nicaragua:

GRANADA, Nicaragua, Thursday, Oct. 30, 1856.

HON. CHARLES S. MOREHEAD—Dear Sir: I have been requested to write some account of this country, and of the present condition of things here, for publication in Kentucky; and as I know of no one to whom such a publication could with more propriety be addressed than yourself, I take the liberty of intending addressing to you a very hasty sketch of one of the most interesting countries in the world. I shall endeavor to write plainly upon such subjects as I do touch upon, and shall select from the varied and multiplied topics of interest, connected both with the present and this country and with its past history, only such subjects as need but to be spoken of to be comprehended by the simplest effort of the mind.

And in the first place, the commercial position of this country is not alone in relation to Central American interests, and the advantage that it gives to this State, but in the relation it bears to, and the benefit it can bestow upon, the commerce of Europe, America, Asia, and the islands both of the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, the most important of any in the world. You are, no doubt, well acquainted with the controversy between the State of Nicaragua and the American Atlantic and Pacific Canal Company, or, more familiarly speaking, the Vanderbilt line. By turning your eye for a moment to the map of Central America, and ranging along the line from Greytown to San Juan Del Sur, and then examining the other proposed routes across the Isthmus, I think you will at once see that Nicaragua can furnish the best, if not the only canal route across the Isthmus. I think it is the only route by which a canal can be built to connect the two oceans. The lakes Managua and Nicaragua are both some two or three hundred feet higher than either the Atlantic or Pacific ocean; and from the town of Virgin Bay, on Lake Nicaragua, westward (through a gap in the mountains) the distance is only twelve miles, almost one-half of this is level ground, and at the best proper elevation above the ocean for canal purposes; the remaining portion (say seven miles) is a mountain, rising, perhaps, at its highest elevation, to the height of 600 feet. Thus, you will perceive, that the whole distance to be canaled, to admit the passage of steamers, is only twelve miles; and that through a country where there is an abundance of timber and of stone for constructing a canal, and where labor can be procured as cheap as in any place in the world. That a canal can be built for vessels of heavy tonnage to pass through from ocean to ocean, there can be no doubt, as Nicaragua abounds in running mountain streams, supplied by bountiful rains. The route described is the one upon which VANDERBILT & Co. heretofore held a grant from the State of Nicaragua, and is at present used as a transit route by CHAS. MORGAN and C. K. GARRISON.

The next point of interest to which I will turn your attention is, the agricultural resources of this country, and I shall do so simply by naming over some of the products of the country, among which are to be found coffee, sugar, cocoa, (or nut from which chocolate is made,) cotton, Indian corn, wheat, and tobacco; of course all of the tropical fruits grow abundantly. Of Indian corn three crops are produced annually, and it is the opinion of men who have been raised in the Mississippi Valley States that at least three times as much corn can be produced here as in the best of those States. The sugar cane grows much rather than in the southern portion of the United States, and unquestionably almost double the amount of sugar can be produced here, such for some reason, it is produced in the [illegible] as you will find on your table. Coffee grows as [illegible] in the world. The coffee of Costa Rica is that produced here, and various other dyes and dye-woods. The forests are full of the most valuable kinds of wood. Mahogany grows in such abundance as to be used for common building purposes, and the gum tree, from which India-rubber is made, is also abundant. Ebony, rosewood and Brazil wood all flourish here. Stock of all kinds common to the United States does well here. Horses, mules, hogs and cows do well all over the country, and in portions of this State and others of the Central American States (the high table lands) sheep do well and are grown with great profit and advantage; domestic fowls are fully as abundant as in Kentucky.

This country is also rich in the precious metals. Gold and silver are so abundant as but to await North American enterprise and energy to develop them, to give a new impetus to the business of the world. I must not neglect to say that the forests abound in game, deer, wild turkey, and various kinds of small game, and besides the lion, and the tiger, and the leopard roam the forests, "monarchs of all they survey." They will one day afford sport for the bold spirit of adventure that characterizes the Kentucky hunter.

But it is not alone in agricultural and commercial resources that Nicaragua, and, indeed, all of the Central American States, present themselves in an imposing and interesting attitude to the world, but in the political attitude which they must, in a very short time, occupy in relation to European and American politics. These States must soon form themselves into a Republican Confederacy, under one grand federal head, with a constitution and laws similar to those of the United States, or else be subjected to the iron grasp of aristocratic power. I know you well enough to know that you will exclaim with me, this last "shall not be, or some shall bleed for it." Nicaragua has, for twenty years, been the scene of civil war, and of the contests of rival factions for power, and of a priestly influence more blighting than "war, pestilence and famine," drawing within its vortex of bigotry and superstition the human mind, and dragging it down to a hell of ignorance, in comparison with which it would be palpable injustice, if not blasphemy, to mention the Egyptian worship of a Bull God, or the more detestable mummery and jugglery of Juggernaut.

Such as I have described it was the condition of things about sixteen months ago, when Gen. WILLIAM WALKER, being invited by a party of Spanish Americans possessing great power, and professing a desire to use that power to redeem their country from anarchy, blood-shed, and ruin, joined them, and in a little time by his assistance and the few North Americans that were with him (fifty-six I believe) succeeded in establishing the power of the party whose interests he came to advocate; but he soon found that he had only driven away one set of marauders and robbers, to establish in their stead another set of scoundrels equally as adverse as the former to the establishment of anything like good government and equally as rapacious as they for the public plunder. Not only did he find himself and the country thus situated, but with characteristic perfidy, treachery, and injustice they violated every promise they had made to him, and they would have driven him from the country in disgrace or taken his life if they had dared to do so. They soon found, however, that they could not do it. The moment that he came into the country and obtained sufficient power to do so, he invited from abroad, and principally from the United States, all white persons favorable to the establishment of a good Republican Government, and many knowing the advantages of this country came in, some to procure themselves homes, other to win fame in the service of this country; ALL of these in the hour of need stepped forward to WALKER's assistance, so that he very soon found himself in a condition to cope with and to defeat and drive out the enemies of the country and establish a good Government for the people, which Government continues its existance to this day. Gen. WALKER has now under his command an army of from 1,600 to 1,700 men, well supplied with arms and with ammunition, well clothed and with abundant means of subsistence; and his force is continually increasing. At its present strength it is sufficient for defense against any and all the forces that Central America can bring to bear against it; and he hopes within the next two months to have an army with which to knock at the doors of Costa Rica, Guatemala and San Salvador, and demand reparation for the injuries done to the State of Nicaragua, and if they refuse to make the "amend honorable" then will he take the liberty to exact such indemnity as will teach them for the future to understand the meaning of the term good neighborhood, and comply with its requisites. I have said, and it is the opinion not only of General WALKER, but of those at the head of affairs here, both in the civil and military departments, that there is no power in Central America that can unseat General WALKER or retard the onward progress of this Government to the permanent establishment of a Republican Government upon the model of the United States, and we have an abiding faith that our brothers at the North, being of a common birthright with us—the heritage of liberty and good government will not permit the rude hand of European tyranny and power to blast that the light of liberty that comes to redeem this land and the people from the horrors of civil war, and the worse than savage barbarism that exists that wholly lacks the idea of the establishment of any permanent good government. It requires neither prophecy nor inspiration to foretell that the government established under the auspices of a great Republican Government in Nicaragua involves the establishment of a similar Government in the other Central American States; should such be the case, I leave you, Mr. Editor, the pleasing task of tracing the beneficial results that must follow to humanity, and the impetus that must be given to republican principles.

There is one other matter and I will conclude to you, and I will then bring this letter to a close. It is this: There are two decrees of the Government here of which the one bearing date of the 2d of April last, and that of 16th of July last. I am one of a Board of Commissioners to carry those decrees into effect, and it is my duty to give to the occupants of two or three years at least expenditure of dollars search of valuable property will be and under said decrees. I inclose you a list of property to be sold on the 1st of January next, with an assessed valuation at very low rates, which I hope you will have published, as I think it will give to young Kentuckians, and indeed to all who wish to do so, an opportunity to purchase estates infinitically more valuable than the best of the Southern portion of the United States. Military scrip of the State of Nicaragua will be taken in payment for these estates the same as gold or silver, and the scrip can now be bought for from sixteen and ten cents on the dollar. I trust that some enterprising men from the Southern States, will come to this country with their slaves, and go instead to work; and if decrees like those of this Government pertaining to all persons the privilege to do so, the object being to invite Slave labor, without which the resources of the country can never be fully and profitably developed; upon this subject you need not entertain a doubt. I am now acting as Sub-Secretary of State and speak by authority. There are many subjects of interest besides those that I have mentioned; and among others I will mention that this country is richer in historic lore than any on earth. Not only do I see around me evidences of the former spirit of enterprise and adventure, and the spirit which gave rise to the discovery of a new continent, but I see also evidences of a former grandeur and magnificence bespeaking a knowledge of the fine arts, and of science, and of all the liberal modes of life, and the comforts that spring from well-regulated and properly organized society; but, alas! I see all of these things in a condition to make one weep over the mutability of human inventions and works made by the hand of man. These things, were there nothing else, bespeak a degeneracy in this people that might be mourned over and lamented in more eloquent terms than BYRON mourned over the degeneracy of the Greeks and the fallen fortunes of Greece. Thank God it is not only the privilege but the peculiar province and pleasure of American minds to reform and elevate, instead of mourning and lamenting, and they come to elevate this land and people from their degeneracy and fallen condition. I have written, as I said in the beginning, hastily and perhaps very imperfectly, and have not attempted to elaborate any one point that I have touched. Such as this letter is, I hope you will receive it as an evidence of my high regard for you personally.

I have written long, and have not time to write as I wish, other than to write myself your friend, and tell you that I mean in twelve months' time to come to Frankfort and tell you so. My best respects to all of my old friends. Yours, &c.,

JOHN L. RICHMOND.

Mr. Simms Refuses to be Comforted—Correspondence.

From the New-Haven Palladium.

NEW-HAVEN, Saturday, Nov. 22, 1856.

WM. GILLMORE SIMMS, ESQ.—Dear Sir: Your note of the 21st inst., proposing to decline your engagement to lecture for the Young Men's Institute, on Thursday evening, 27th inst., was received last evening at the moment of opening our second lecture; its purport was stated to the audience, and the question put to them whether we should release you from your engagement or hold you to it, with the express understanding that all who voted for holding you, pledged themselves to give you a candid hearing, and we have the satisfaction to state that the vote of an intelligent auditory, to hold you to your engagement, which we regard as binding on you, and one from which you do not wish, and cannot honorably be released without our consent.

The memory of the bear who is the subject of your lecture, is cherished in the heart of every true patriot, and no one can be more entertained by you than will be the audience before you.

[illegible] Friday, Nov. 24.

[illegible] feel compelled to adhere to the decision I have communicated to you, no longer to continue my lectures on subjects which are so unpleasant to me. The moment that I discovered that my very topics furnished a pretext for the renewal of the gross assaults upon my State and people, I was compelled, as a faithful son of the soil, to withdraw from the field. When, in addition to this, I find myself brutally described, in leading and influential papers, as a Southern pauper, "seeking cold charity in Northern Lecture Rooms," it became equally a matter of pride and feeling that I should accept no compensation for anything that I should do in this province. I have, accordingly, had paid over to public charities all the money which has been paid me here. Now, your Society would not desire me to lecture on such terms and it would be utterly impossible, even should I yield in any resolution not to lecture, that I should accept of any compensation. It has become a matter of pride and feeling with me now, not to obtrude myself upon any community, that matter which has been found to be unwholesome, and which has been subjected to so much misrepresentation. I have never been accustomed to the sort of language with which I have been treated. I am not a politician, not familiar with the weapons used by this class of people, and my self-respect forbids me to enter a field in which I am utterly weaponless. I should, my dear Sir, in the present temper of the public, neither promote my own objects, nor answer your expectation. I am not sufficiently cool, not sufficiently assured of my audience, to command the proper resources of the lecturer or orator. A proper respect for your Society requires that I should not carelessly, or recklessly, demand its hearing.

Believe me, my dear Sir, to regret, more deeply than anybody else, the ungracious necessity which I feel in repeating my decision. It is a loss to me of six months of my precious time in the preparation of these lectures. I say nothing of my expectations and disappointments. I have not hastily decided upon a course which is so injurious to my interests, but that I hold the sacrifice to be necessary to my feelings and self-respect.

I am Sir, very regretfully, but respectfully,
Your obedient servant,
W. GILMORE SIMMS.

Not Col. Fremont, but Mr. Banks.

From the Boston Traveller, Nov. 26.

About a week since, in a village just about nine miles from Boston, a rumor was current soon after nightfall, that no less a personage that the distinguished Republican candidate for President, Col. FREMONT, was, at that moment, the guest of Hon. N. P. BANKS, at his residence in Waltham. Quite a number of the staunch Fremonters of the village determined that they would not miss the opportunity, and accordingly a party was formed who walked to the residence of Mr. BANKS, a distance of about two miles. Mr. B., upon learning the object of their visit, cordially invited them in, but, as Col. FREMONT had not been within two hundred and fifty miles of the town, could not gratify their ardent desire for a personal acquaintance with their political hero. Mr. B., however, we suppose in order to fortify them for the fatigues of the road upon their return, gave them a bountiful collation, which, probably, in some degree, consoled them for their sad disappointment.

The Catholic Bishop of New-Jersey Against Expensive Funerals—Only Six Carriages Allowed.

From the Newark Mercury.

It is stated that the Bishop of this Diocese has issued directions that not more than six carriages shall be employed at a funeral, and that in all cases the bodies of the deceased shall be taken into the Church. The reason given by the Bishop for this change is, that the present fashion of a long array of carriages leads to an extravagance and involves an expenditure which many of the parishioners are ill able to afford, compelling them to use money for unnecessary ostentation which should be appropriated to more useful purposes, such as the maintenance of their families, the furtherance of the objects of the Church, &c.

Another objection urged by the Bishop against the present order of things is, that now funerals are frequently made the occasion of pleasure excursions, instead of being exhibitions of solemnity and respect for the memory of the dead. In our view, this order of the Bishop is a very proper one, and if it shall be properly observed, (as it no doubt will be,) wholesome results will certainly accrue. Our Catholic citizens, it is well known, are as a general thing of the poorer class, and the legitimate expense of burying a relative or friend is usually quite as much as they can afford; but when, desiring to present an imposing array of carriages, or to surpass in display some neighbor's funeral, they venture upon a large expense, they impose upon themselves a burden from which months of toil will hardly enable them to escape.

THE GREAT STRUGGLE IN ASIA.

[illegible] Russian intrigues [illegible] Siege of Herat—the British Expedition to the Gulf of Persia—Intervention [illegible] Probabilities of another war between Great Britain and Russia.

One readers are aware that an extensive war is now raging at our antipodes. Its origin is imperfectly understood. Some assert it to be religious fanaticism, and others again assign a more prosaic, though as yet an undeveloped cause—rivalry between England and Russia for supremacy in the East.

The first great event we have to record, since an appeal to arms was determined upon, is the siege of Herat by a Persian army. According to Persian authority, the expedition was undertaken as a punitive crusade against Isaz Khan, Governor of Herat, who, it was alleged, had authorized and [illegible] the recent Sheeah massacre—a sect of which the Shah of Persia is the acknowledged chief and protector. For though both the Sheehas and the Sonnees, among whom Isaz Khan is numbered, are believers in Islamism, yet, as in [illegible] of better faith, they are bitterly opposed on doctrinal points, each accusing the other of heresy. The Sheehas, under the Shah, adopt Ali, while the Sonnees, dominant in Turkey and Egypt, recognize the Caliphs Abooberkir, Omar, and Osman as the successors of Mahomet. Therefore, when the Sheehas of Herat appealed to Persia for help against their Afghan enemies, both the chief and his people were not left to accord it.

Whether it is proper to mention, as the Persian excuse for undertaking the war. On the other hand, English journals deny that the interference of the Shah, as protector of the Sheeah Faith, was rendered necessary by the cruelties inflicted on his co-religionists by the Sonnees of Herat. They allege that the accusation of Afghan intolerance is false, and that even if it was true, the persecution of the Sheehas of Herat is a matter of profound indifference to the Persians of Teheran. Be this as it may, political reasons have doubtless influenced the Persians to open hostilities. Since 1838—when their first invasion was repulsed—the Persians have coveted the possession of the independent chieftaincy of Herat, and, as during the late war, the Shah befriended Russia, remaining neutral or not, just as he was directed, it is not difficult to suppose that he has been secretly encouraged by the Czar's Government to prosecute his present scheme of aggrandisement. Had the war in Europe been protracted, there can scarcely be a doubt but that active operations would have been commenced on the frontiers of India. It is asserted as a fact, too well known for contradiction, that in the beginning of the present year, Russia had made every preparation, in conjunction with Persia, for an expedition against this same chieftaship of Herat, and that a large Russian force was ready to quit the Caspian Sea and occupy the Persian towns of Amol and Astrabad with this avowed object. From these facts it is argued, and with, at first, show of probability, that the Herat expedition in which Persia is now engaged, originated in Russian counsels, and was planned for the purpose of attacking England through her Indian possessions. Time will doubtless more fully develop how far these speculations are correct. But as the case now stands, we are disposed to attach to them considerable weight. From the geographical position of Russia the ambition of her sovereigns must look, as it has ever looked since the days of CATHERINE, to the East, and not to the West, for fresh fields of conquest. During the late war her vast resources and great diplomatic skill were taxed to the utmost to sustain her reputation in the East; and if, after the fall of Sebastopol, she lost caste in the eyes of Europe, the capture of Kars and the retreat of OMAR PASHA appeared to the credulous natives of Asia a full and satisfactory equivalent. To them the colossal strength and power of Russia are [illegible] facts—especially to the Shah, at whose Court, when the Treaty of Paris was signed, Russian ascendency was never more complete.

Whatever was the cause—whether at Russian instigation or not—a large Persian army moved from Resht from the shores of the Caspian. Throughout the months of June, July and August, the Persian General, following the plan of Mouravyev at Kars, established a strict blockade, and seemed determined to await the time when famine should force the garrison to surrender. But, of this event, we have as yet, no intelligence. Without the possibility of receiving any external aid, the fortress seems most probable, and in that case, a massacre, and the commission of those fearful atrocities which follow in the wake of Eastern warfare, may be expected. The latest advices from Herat are to the beginning of September. They state that the provisions were exhausted, and that the garrison were living on a limited allowance of horse-flesh, which must soon give out. The state accounts represent the Persians to be in capital condition, and in expectation of a speedy and easy victory over their exhausted enemy. The army had been reinforced, and now numbered 100,000 men—double that of the allies when they first sat down before Sebastopol. They consisted of some 50,000 infantry, a body of cavalry which occupied the surrounding country, and a regular siege train, the whole under command of the Persian General TEIZ KHAN. A French engineer directed the siege works, and an Austrian officer commanded the cavalry. The Afghans within the city are represented to be in complete disorganization, and every day large desertions to the enemy are taking place. The defence is conducted by an English officer in the East India Company's service. By recent accounts the batteries had opened against Fort Nouchky, said to be the key of the external works, and, if taken, would be certainly followed by the fall of Herat. It was even reported that this event had actually occurred, but a telegraphic dispatch from Constantinople offers an explanation of the rumor, that two Persian regiments were admitted into Herat through the connivance of the Sheahs within, but were shortly after expelled with heavy loss. Nevertheless, it seems to be admitted on all hands that the capture of Herat is, ere this, a settled fact. The only hope for aid lay in the advance of DOST MOHAMMED KHAN; but, far from being able to do so, he was himself in the midst of a hostile population at Candahar, some 400 miles distant, and at the head of a mutinous army. That noted warrior, therefore, is taxed to the utmost to maintain his own position.

Such is the condition of affairs at Herat that has arisen with the intervention of England. In the open field, certain Russian designs upon Herat—designs carried out, but then only foreshadowed—induced England to enter into a treaty with the Shah by which Persia bound herself to support no measures against the independence of that chieftaship. The present movement against Herat, in open violation of this treaty, was, therefore, at once the signal for British interference, and it was promptly determined to fit out at Bombay an imposing expedition to be sent into Persian waters. The British Minister, besides other minor propositions in reparation for the previous dismissal of the English charge d'affaires, demanded peremptorily the unconditional withdrawal of the Shah's forces from Herat, and to this he is now will bag to wheedle, not to expostulate, the more determination will have the effect instead of causing him to relinquish the siege.

The British expedition was expected to start from Bombay, but we have not yet received the intelligence of its departure from Bombay. Its destination is the Gulf of Persia. The arrangements are not yet sufficiently complete, and sufficient for every emergency. The officers belonging to the Indian Navy are perfectly familiar with the Gulf of Persia and with the coasts that [illegible] it, and the safe passage of the steamers, with the transports in tow, is regarded as next to a certainty. The first place of rendezvous will be the Island of Karrack—a convenient depôt for war materiel—which will be reached after a fortnight's sail from Bombay. Leaving a strong garrison here—for it is presumed that the Island is incapable of defence—the fleet will then stand across for Bushire, a place of much more importance. For this is the port through which Persia receives a large portion of her Indian supplies, and its capture, it is argued, will affect the direct revenue of the Crown, and may bring the Shah at once to his senses. Here, too, it is not apprehended that any serious resistance will be offered; or, if there is, that it will require more than a few gun-boats to insure its reduction. The walls are already crumbling into ruins by the action of the sun, and a very small bombardment would complete their ruin. Around Bushire the whole expeditionary force, consisting of some 20,000 men—infantry, cavalry and siege trains—will remain encamped for several months, to await the progress of events. If by the Spring the Shah still refuses to accede to the British demands, or, having captured Herat, should still attack it, the expedition will in that case move on as far as Kazeroon, where the climate is cooler, and make it a base for future operations. In addition to the occupation of Bushire, the whole coast will be strictly blockaded, and the Persian trade, especially in sugar and spices, will be cut off. But although the blockade will occasion no little distress among the people, it is not supposed that the Shah, a man of great obstinacy, will yield—not at least under the pressure of this preliminary British demonstration. It is worthy of note here that the British-Indian papers are discussing the propriety of perpetually retaining Bushire and Karrack. The former, they say, offers a convenient post for a strong garrison, to be maintained as a permanent force of observation upon Persia, while the latter would be valuable as a repeating station on the projected telegraphic line between India and England, and might further be of value as a tête-de-pont to Bombay. That something of this sort will be done to pay the expenses of the expedition is probable; it will only be in strict conformity with the uniform policy of Great Britain in the East.

But while these great preparations for an invasion of Southern Persia are going on, the Shah, unable to meet them with physical force, has resorted to Diplomacy to avert the danger with which he is menaced. Recent advices inform us that FERROUKH KHAN, Ambassador from the Court of Teheran, had arrived at Constantinople with the object, it is said, of proceeding to Paris to ask the intervention of LOUIS NAPOLEON in his master's favor. The English Government is steadily opposed to submitting the question to arbitration, and for obvious reasons will not consent that France should be the arbitrator. The jealousy with which the latter has reviewed, and continues to view, the growth of British power in the East is well understood, and the bitter rivalry that has always existed between the French and English missions at the Court of the Shah is a matter of unquestioned notoriety. It is a complaint, even now, in England, that the French minister offered no objections to the Persian expedition against Herat, and that the principal officer in command of the siege works is a French Engineer of distinction. We find the French Press—all more or less under Imperial surveillance—differing widely from their English cotemporaries as to the origin of the war, the one justifying what the other condemns. The inconsistency of British ministerial journals is also significant; for while, on the one hand, they declare that a cordial understanding exists between England and France in regard to the Persian question; on the other, they say, in the same breath, that the question of Herat is one which concerns England and England only, admits of no compromise, and requires no arbitration. It is, moreover, apparent, from the prominence given by British ministerial journals to the diplomatic efforts of Russia against India, that England is seeking so to use French jealousy and French prejudice as to gain for herself that very French support which she affects to have already secured. If, therefore, FERROUKH KHAN prosecutes his mission and proceeds to Paris, it will be curious to note his reception by the Emperor, for that will be some indication of the solidity of the Western alliance. But if the Ambassador, instead of proceeding to Paris, should remain at Constantinople—as many suppose he will—it would, in our opinion, be a symptom that LOUIS NAPOLEON is not disposed to regard his mission with special favor.

We have thus, very briefly, sketched the alleged causes and the progress of this Persian war against the independant chieftaship of Herat. Confined to its legitimate sphere, the contest matters little to us or to the civilized world; we don't care much whether an Affghan or a Persian chief rules in Herat, or whether the Soonee or the Sheeah sect of Islamism triumph. But to local questions of faith or politics, the war, as we have seen, has not been confined, and in its results, promises to extend over a wider area and into deeper complications. Russia, we are told, has pledged her honor to the Shah that if England resents the attack on Herat, she would come forward to protect him, even though she risked thereby the resumption of the war in Europe. Now, England has resented the attack upon Herat, and has at this moment dispatched an imposing armament to invade the Southern portion of the Shah's dominions. How, then, will Russia act? In England, no doubt seems to be entertained upon the matter: and we find the following significant paragraph in the leading ministerial paper: "If Russia—as there is too much reason to apprehend—should have it in contemplation to attempt, at no distant period, the retrieval of her position by another appeal to arms, nothing could be more favorable to her policy than the events which are now passing in Persia; and which, unless we anticipate the crisis may be expected in due course to lead to the establishment of a Russian garrison in the impregnable position of Herat, in friendly alliance with the Shah, and presenting a most menacing front to India." The same paper earnestly draws attention to this impending danger, and argues that "if, owing to French lukewarmness, or to the active interference of Russia in the north of Persia, the occupation of Bushire and subsequent operations should be insufficient to compel the Shah's restoration of Herat to its legitimate ruler, then England must be prepared to resort to extreme measures, in Europe as well as in Asia, in support of her defensive Indian policy—to such measures, for instance, as renewing the war with Russia, or revolutionizing Persia, or even placing a garrison of British troops in the disputed fortress."

Here, then, we have the secret to the continued hostility between Great Britain and Russia. The treaty of Paris is but a thin veil to conceal the bitter rivalry between these powers,—a rivalry that must sooner or later end in open war for ascendancy in the East. The ambition of both is turned in the same direction, but the ambition of both cannot be satisfied. To both, moreover, are the issues of vital importance;—to Russia, because Destiny points to Asia as the sphere for future conquests and future glory; to England, because of the vastness of the stake that lies in the security of her Indian possessions.

JOHN MITCHEL ON EUROPEAN TOPICS.

Report of Mr. Mitchel's Lecture at St. Louis.

From the St. Louis Republican.

The reputation which Mr. MITCHEL had compassed for himself, and the curiosity which naturally enough revelled to hear what he should say upon a subject which, to him, is a matter of keen interest, brought together a large, as well as an intelligent audience on Saturday night last, at the Hall of the Mercantile Library. The manner of the speaker is different from what a reading of his published works would lead a listener to expect; nevertheless, the matter of his discourse came up fully to the anticipations of his audience. As a speaker, he is not the most pleasant to whom we have listened, but the faults we find are forgotten in the brilliancy of what he utters, and the force with which he delivers himself. Without being a fluent speaker, he is not at a loss for words, and he expresses his ideas in chaste and elegant language. His words are well selected as to quantity, and they are distinctly uttered, but at the best there is some appearance of embarrassed diction, caused by the effort to restrain an impulsive nature. Mr. MITCHEL took his place in the rostrum shortly after the time announced, and delivered a discourse which occupied an hour and forty minutes. He remarked that he was to solicit the attention of his audience this evening to the affairs of a distant portion of the world, to ask them to turn their minds away for a little space of time, from their own glorious land—the affairs of which, for the past six months, have been of more absorbing interest—to look with him across the sea. "Separated as we are by a world of water," said WASHINGTON, "from other countries, if we are wise, we shall surely observe those relations which Nature has appointed." Like every word that fell from the lips of WASHINGTON, that was wise and true, but the Atlantic is not one-quarter the width that it was in WASHINGTON's day. There is no world of water now; the Atlantic is no barrier, but a beaten highway, whereon a MAURY has almost set up finger-posts, and what is even a more impressive circumstance in this, when the telegraph wire is once dashed to Newfoundland, a Board of Admiralty sitting at the War-Office in London, can whisper the word of command to armies in this country in five minutes. Here are elements introduced that dry up the Atlantic almost. The movements of Europe are not only interesting to us, then, as the movements of the parent whence we all sprang, but for this reason, that they have come so close to us.

Republican Refugees are continually making appeals to American opinion in this day. In fact, appeals are ever coming across the seas to America. Republican Refugees claiming and appealing for American sympathy, for the good cause, which they have left bleeding at home. What the views and expectations of these refugees are, he thought he ought to know, having, in fact, the honor to be one of them himself.

But when he said Republican, it would perhaps be well to explain his meaning, for fear of mistake, for words change their meaning so fast now-a-days, in these times of party strife. When he said Republicanism, he did not mean Ethiopian or Black Republicanism. [Loud cheering.] On the other hand the Monarchs of Europe have their agents at work, in a thousand channels, to conciliate the American people on their side and against their people. He need hardly observe that the most active in that direction is the monarch of Great Britain. So that it may be assumed that there is the expectancy, that in the trouble of coming years, this Republic shall have some part to play—some word to say. The suffrages of the American people are courted, their influence, or at least, their sympathies, are wanted, on one side or the other. Now that the smoke of the American's own periodical family controversy is allayed, perhaps it might be as good a time as any to look across the sea, and see how it fares with our heavy laden brethren of Europe.

To prophesy is easy and delightful; it was not his province, but he would try to fall in with that current of prevailing sentiment, and depict the prospects and position of the European people, and this he would do as smoothly as he could. We all know that peace has been proclaimed in Paris, this very year, and this with illuminations and rejoicings perhaps more than enough. Now, has there been peace in Europe, or is there no peace? True, peace has been proclaimed; the semi-barbarian Russians, as we are diligently taught to believe, have been taught a lesson, they have received a check, land marks have been established in the nations, thus far shall thou come and no farther—war—there is no war any longer; war is bound over to keep the peace. BELLONA, a strong-minded female, has grown old, we are told, though she has not lost any of her teeth, and she has been pensioned off, she may go to the school-marm, in the school of human progress, and learn lessons of ANTOINETTE BRAWN. [Laughter.] But more, we are called on to enjoy the gladness of the time. Justice is smiling with her scales of justice. What more? Swords have been beaten into plough-shares. That is to say, that the guns and bayonets have been taken from the militia, and replaced in the Government armories, that they may not do harm in the hands of freemen.

THE STATE OF THE PEOPLE.

Let him add what brilliant touches he could to the picture, and make it as bright as possible. The British funds are not down or up, but balancing themselves with considerable cunning on nothing. France glories in her newly established credit mobilier, in which a franc can represent ten thousand, as long as his Imperial Highness lends the credit. Not only so, but Crimean heroes also, are above par. Many a Mademoiselle of France and many an English maiden rejoices in her Crimean lover, though his sleeve hangs loose without an arm. Fortunate men, they, for they are the last to be wooed from the battle-field. Hereafter, among civilized nations, the suitor and the bridegroom shall have two arms, and be without cross, medal or star. Is this an exaggeration? Why, the treaty of Paris, by the third article, announces not peace only—peace is nothing—but the perpetual friendship of these powers, Russia, Austria, France, Prussia, and Sardinia. What an affectionate band of brothers they are! [Laughter.] Peace and perpetual friendship is absolutely between them, and if such be the case between the European Governments, who will refuse them joy? But as to the people, that is quite another matter, as he would presently show.

It must be remembered that throughout all these rejoicings and illuminations, through all the festivals and glories of royal christenings and coronations, men are all around to be found who persist in seeing no peace at all, but only a short armistice, who say that this inevitable war was not only not yet finished, but not begun; that the great game of the war was not yet made up,—the stakes not yet ascertained, the match not arranged and partners not drawn. But then the Emperor of France says the war is ended. Moreover, they said that the ruling element had not begun to move at all, the men of the European Democracy. That the war, in short, had not yet been crowned with the revolution that has had its martyrs for forty years. It has only cast its shadow forth, this to come shall be the war, the other being but the semblance. That war which Princes, Prelates, Serene Highnesses and Millionaire Stockholders, have not yet begun to believe in, but which every shinking man in Europe knows must burst out, and when it comes, Princes, Principalities, and Serene Highnesses must go down to perdition loaded with the heavy curses of the world. [Cheers.]

WHAT OTHERS THINK.

He knew that such prophets of war had arisen, and by all the organs of public opinion—he meant by this the organs of the dominant classes—they had been laughed at. It is the policy of these organs to deny it altogether, and what is strange, even here in America, so apt are we to take our opinion from the presses of Europe—even here in America, in this Republic of the United States—in this republic which exists by a revolution—that stands on a revolution—there is a disposition to the disbelief in the fact of revolution among the population of Europe. Americans are too apt to flatter themselves that they alone know how to win and wear liberty. He desired candor, let his audience take a look with him this day, at the actual condition of the European people. He said European people in contradistinction to the ruling classes, under Dukes and Serene Highnesses. Let them turn their eyes away from coronations and regal christenings and consider how it fares with the farmer, the artisan, the mechanic, in short with the people who supply all that imperial pomp and power.

THE PEOPLE.

It is a fact, and let Americans realize it themselves if they could, that in all the German States, in Austria, throughout Italy and France, every farmer and artisan is under the surveillance of the police, not one of them can move from his known and registered place of residence, without passports, visas and countersigns. They must be passed by the police; the police must know where they sleep at night. And why is this precaution taken? Why, lest these men should be stirring communications between revolutionary societies, lest under pretext of looking for work they should be carrying communications amongst secret organizations.

These societies are well known to exist. Societies of a revolutionary character are known to be spread to the very remotest quarters, and to be all in the pasture of awaiting the moment to spring. They are in Northern Italy, covered as it is with Austrian troops and overspread with Austrian forts from end to end, where every traveler who comes by railroad or otherwise, if in the opinion of the Austrian sentry or police he smells of Young Italy, if his beard be cut in a republican style, if they do not like the color of his hat, or hinder the dangerous one, sometimes half a dozen times a day, must stand to prison or back whence he came, perhaps for weeks, perhaps for the remainder of his life time. In France the patient Republicans are ready to be overpowered by Bonaparte, he is obliged, [illegible] to wear his heart, to govern his subjects with severity.

In Hungary, liberal England. He speaking thought he should search some one of his hearers say, "what is he going to say of England?" [Uncommon applause.] What is there that this nation is revolutionized in all its parts, but, in order to bully somebody, she turns on the King of Gods. [illegible] she swears King and Emperor [illegible] without any of his own favorite oaths, and then turns to America, makes small, she makes demonstrations to the West Indies and in Canada, sends ships, and troops, and military stores to Halifax—reviews at Spithead, with great pomp, the thundering fleet, and she improves the occasion, through her Ministers of State, to read a homily, to give warning to any nation that may happen to have an expansive seaboard.

Singular to say, in the middle of these demonstrations her Ambassador is sent home in disgrace from Washington. [Cheers.] Sent home, not, I am pained to say, while the hands are full of the Russian war, but when she had put that to an end for the present—when she had not had enough of fighting—just when her men were fuming with vexation at that work cut too short—while her hand is lifted, and her voice is raised to frighten, her Ambassador is sent home with such ignoming as never before. [Applause.] What does she do? Send home Mr. DALLAS? Decline war? No! my Lord PALMERSTON takes a very different measure, indeed, and dubs the disgraced Ambassador Knight of the Bath; it ought to be Knight of the Horse pond. [Loud cheers.] America proves intractable—hard to bully; so Lord PALMERSTON looks around, like a true bully as he is, to see who is weak, and who has got no friends. [Laughter.] Greece is taken care of by France, so that, in looking over the map of Europe, PALMERSTON sees no fairer game than FERDINAND of Naples. Now, FERDINAND is compelled to rule his subjects with a great deal of severity; he shuts up many of them in dismal dungeons, without charges preferred against them, or trials granted. He has banished a good many of them, like the rest of Kings, to foreign countries. In all this he imitates feebly—he follows the example of England and France; but, just at this moment Lords CLARENDON and PALMERSTON feel scandalized at his unconstitutional mode of governing, and the Emperor of France is feeble in health, and his nerves cannot bear it. A squadron is sent to sail.

SONDA, A LEADER OF HISTORY.

King FERDINAND calmly concentrates his troops—manns his forts, shots his guns, and tells these philanthropic powers to mind their own business. [Immense applause.] Now, King FERDINAND is even so ill-bred as to quite the hardest circumstances—he alludes to Ireland and to Ireland. He has read the newspapers, he has read history, he knows the story of 1848 in Ireland. He knows that when the Queen of England thought she was surrounded by some revolutionary movements, she suspended the habeas corpus act, and seized hundreds and thousands of men and shut them up, and never brought them to trial to this time. King FERDINAND knows this, and he retorts on Lord PALMERSTON with great effect. But he has read also how England, with its liberal and enlightened Government, has a system by which it can rid itself of two millions and upwards of its enemies by an artificial famine, and indeed he envies them the secret. Indeed he (the speaker) believed no despotic Government on earth ever conceived such a foul system, and perhaps if King FERDINAND knew the way he would try it, but he was willing to believe he would not. King BOMBA has also read how England is obliged to have recourse to torture in India to collect her taxes. He knows of no familiar of the Inquisition in the world who ever knew how to torture a man's body for the saving of his soul so cunningly as British officers can tear and gear the India farmer. So he says, take your own harpy claws of Ireland, rule India with less savage barbarity, and then I may perhaps listen to you.

He dwelt so long on this, not only to show the kind of spirit which BYRON declared was the prevailing mobile of English society, but to show the complication of European affairs.

SAUCE FOR THE GOOSE, &c.

It is well remembered how Russia threatened Turkey about the Christian Greeks three years ago, and now England attempts the same thing Russia comes in and says, abide by your own rule; do not presume to interfere with the rights of sovereign King Ferdinand; like case like rule, and if you attempt to fire one broadside into Naples, you must prepare for war with me. [Cheers.] Now what can do his contingency? The fleet was commissioned, the squadron had set sail, the ultimatum was drawn out. The fleet cruised out, they bore up toward and drifted to leeward, but they never went up to Naples. From the highest tower the King of Naples could not see even the topsail of one of them. Not only that, but placards were stuck up on the walls of the city to this effect: Lost or strayed, somewhere in the Mediterranean, two good fleets; whoever signal them as being seen, to the Minister, shall be rewarded. [Laughter.] But strange to say, at this moment a powerful Russian fleet sails into the Mediterranean merely to guard her trade and merchant shipping. And Spain at the same instant sent all her fleet into the same waters, but merely as a kind of maritime police. Sardinia, too, sees what is going on, and Austria commissions her fleet to cruise in the Adriatic, hard by, but only for exercise. At the same time the American Consul at Naples thinks it just as wise as to make a requisition on the Commodore of his nation, that he had better be in the Bay of Naples, to be there too. Is it not strange that in one year after this peace these brothers should have to be watching over each other?

The truth is, the English have got up this measure to get hold of Sicily, but France has no idea of suffering England to take Sicily. PALMERSTON talks of his Italian intervention with a view to raise up an insurrection in Naples, then of crushing it and selling EMMA on his throne, and, lastly, of taking Sicily as the prize. France waits to watch the English fleet, Austria to watch both, and Russia thinks they are all worth watching. What perpetual friendship.

But, in the meantime, while such is the state under which the Western Powers exist, England particularly presumes to have the right to interfere. Young Italy haunts them in their dreams!

In the meantime, while these things are going on in Italy, the peace is assuming an alarming aspect in the East. The frontier of Bessarabia has not begun to be settled yet, to say nothing of the Isle of Serpents. In fact, Lord PALMERSTON's organs complain of these barbarous Russians for giving Lord CLARENDON false maps. These same barbarous Russians who gave Lord DUNDAS false charts, and let some of his ships go ashore in water fabulously marked on charts as being twenty feet, and who extinguished all the lights of the lighthouses when NAPIER wanted to go up, remain barbarous. So that with such barbarians to deal with, it is impossible to say how soon the details of this tiresome peace will ever be settled. In the meantime, Turkey, poor Turkey, lies lost and powerless. It is no longer a sick man; the man is dead, dead as ever was, and shortly there will be a battle over his corpse.

CHRISTIANITY VS. BARBARISM.

But one slight advantage that has come to it is, that Turkey has got the reopening of the trade in the free-born white women of Circassia,—the traffic in Christian slaves. While Russia predominated in that sea, the sale of the Circassian was stayed; Russia called that trade piracy,—contraband, and treated it so, to the great curtailment of the pleasures of Moslem life; but when the Christian Allies came into the Black Sea, as the champions of civilization and justice, when they shut up the Russian fleet in fortified harbors, the trade was re-opened with greater vigor than before. Such is one fruit of the intervention of the Western Powers between Turkey and Russia. Now, this opening of the traffic in white slaves has become notorious. It became so notorious that the Bishop of Oxford, a member of the House of Lords and a son of WILLIAM WILBERFORCE of Abolition memory, this Bishop, after long pondering of the circumstances, thought that a decent respect for hawn sleeves and silk aprons required that he should do something in the matter; that he should calmly, and in a Christian-like manner, advert to the circumstance in Parliament, so he mentioned it in Parliament. He was instantly instructed by his noble friend, Lord CLARENDON, by his being assured that the attention of Government was turned to that painful thing, and moreover, that SCHAMYL, the Circassian Chief, was opposed to it. The Bishop knew that all this was false—that SCHAMYL was not opposed to the trade—that he had warred for years against Russia to maintain it, but he was satisfied that he had done his duty, and he sat down with all the becoming satisfaction that a man feels who has done a good action, and the trade remained, and still remains, growing more horrible every day. And, since the day that the Bishop so called the attention of the Government to the fact, we find that the trade has been increasing to such an extent that the old stock of slaves had become utterly valueless, and murder has become more frequent in Constantinople. Every night sacks, with the mingled corpses of females, are thrown into the Bosphorus. He would read two sentences by English authors, relied on by the Bishop, to give some idea of what the trade is. One says that at present the only trade carried on in Constantinople is that in white women, and this seems to be extraordinarily active at present. Another, and, to his credit, he is said, he disproves of it—writes from Constantinople, regretting to see that the Slave-Trade is greatly on the increase; every boat from the port of Abasia brings in ten or a dozen white Christian women for the market in Constantinople, while even the Austrian steamers do not refuse to bring cargoes of hundreds into port. Think of this British nation that is so filled with horror, righteous and virtuous horror, at the black Slave-Trade, that it sends out one fleet to stop the trade in blacks on the African coast, and sends another to open the traffic in white slaves. [Applause.]

What a profundity of hypocrisy in that Bishop and all the rest of the bench of Bishops, to sit by in Parliament and help with their votes, and give by their votes all the sanction of religious association to all the abominations of English rule in East and West. So for Cabool burned down, and so with Ireland, starved. So! unto you hypocrites, the gory soil of India will long cry out for vengeance on your hoary heads. Not a Circassian girl will float in a sack down the Bosphorus, strangled by the bow-string of her master, when he is tired of her beauty, but it will cling to your souls to curse you to perdition.

BRITAIN'S HOPES AND FEARS.

It is well known that one main object of England, after justice and civilization of course, [laughter,] was to extend her influence in India, and to check that of Russia. With that view both of these powers have been courting Persia, of course with the view in the end, he need hardly say, of swallowing her. Persia thinks of the two the least desirable friend is England, and the two she prefers Russia as a friend and England as a enemy, and he believed her instinct was right. Just when the Peace Commissioners began to make all smooth in Turkey, intelligence came from Teheran that the Persians were on marching in from the East that the Persians were on the way to an advance post of India, and that Russia was building and manning a powerful navy in the Caspian Sea. England takes sudden alarm, a fleet is despatched to the Gulf of Persia with an ultimatum to Persia at the sentence's month. It is well that so far as the Russian forces could march through Persia; long before they should reach Teheran they would meet the English. [Applause.] [illegible] that it is [illegible] that England will get [illegible] there without [illegible] the Persians.

England thus finds it inconvenient to begin to bully Russia, but, in order to bully somebody, she turns on the King of Gods. [illegible] without any of his own favorite oaths, and then turns to America, makes small, she makes demonstrations to the West Indies and in Canada, sends ships, and troops, and military stores to Halifax—reviews at Spithead, with great pomp, the thundering fleet, and she improves the occasion, through her Ministers of State, to read a homily, to give warning to any nation that may happen to have an expansive seaboard.

Singular to say, in the middle of these demonstrations her Ambassador is sent home in disgrace from Washington. [Cheers.] Sent home, not, I am pained to say, while the hands are full of the Russian war, but when she had put that to an end for the present—when she had not had enough of fighting—just when her men were fuming with vexation at that work cut too short—while her hand is lifted, and her voice is raised to frighten, her Ambassador is sent home with such ignoming as never before. [Applause.] What does she do? Send home Mr. DALLAS? Decline war? No! my Lord PALMERSTON takes a very different measure, indeed, and dubs the disgraced Ambassador Knight of the Bath; it ought to be Knight of the Horse pond. [Loud cheers.] America proves intractable—hard to bully; so Lord PALMERSTON looks around, like a true bully as he is, to see who is weak, and who has got no friends. [Laughter.] Greece is taken care of by France, so that, in looking over the map of Europe, PALMERSTON sees no fairer game than FERDINAND of Naples. Now, FERDINAND is compelled to rule his subjects with a great deal of severity; he shuts up many of them in dismal dungeons, without charges preferred against them, or trials granted. He has banished a good many of them, like the rest of Kings, to foreign countries. In all this he imitates feebly—he follows the example of England and France; but, just at this moment Lords CLARENDON and PALMERSTON feel scandalized at his unconstitutional mode of governing, and the Emperor of France is feeble in health, and his nerves cannot bear it. A squadron is sent to sail.

The Approaching Session of Congress—Business to be Transacted—The New Tariff.

The second Session of the XXXIVth Congress will commence on Monday next, the 1st of December, and will terminate, with the Three Administration, on the 4th of March, 1857. Some changes have occurred in this Congress since its first session was adjourned last September. JESSE M. CLAYTON, Senator from Delaware, and JAMES MEACHAM, Senator from Vermont, have been removed by death. GEORGE P. HOWARD, a Republican, has been appointed to succeed Mr. MEACHAM, and Mr. CORWIN, the old-line Clay Whig, has been appointed in the place of the Delaware Senator, THOMAS H. BAYLY, a member of the House from Virginia, who was absent most of the last session on account of sickness, has died. His successor is MUSCOE H. R. GARNETT, a Democrat. JAMES C. ALLEN, a Democrat, is returned from Illinois to the seat in the House which he vacated last Winter, in a contest with Mr. ARCHER, a Republican.

WILLIAM A. RICHARDSON, notorious as the second fiddle to DOUGLAS, who resigned his seat in the House to run as the Democratic candidate for Governor of Illinois, and was defeated, will be succeeded in this Session by J. DENIS, JOHN R. DE MORMANDIE, a Democrat, from Illinois, succeeds Judge TURNBULL, who resigned his seat in the House. From Missouri, WILLIAM ARMSTRONG, a Know-Nothing, takes the place of JOHN G. MILLER, an Administration man.

It is probable that the early part of the Session will be consumed in a struggle for the adoption or rejection of WHITFIELD, as a delegate from Kansas, who will reappear to claim a seat in the House, for which he has no title. The appropriation for this purpose will in all probability be passed and to the country. His only claim to be admitted as a delegate is his election under the spurious Missouri Legislature of Kansas. The House, at the last Session, refused to recognize the acts of this Legislature, and adjudged WHITFIELD by a vote of 101 Yeas to 93 Nays. We hope they will do so again.

The topics of this Session of Congress will be very numerous and interesting. It will relate principally to the TARIFF. The report of Mr. L. D. CAMPBELL, from the Committee of Ways and Means, on the "propriety of an early revision and reduction of the tariff of duties on imports," which was ordered to be printed Aug. 11, 1856, will be called up very early in the Session, and will form the basis of action on this subject.

The propriety of reducing the tariff of Duties upon Imports rests upon the principle, stated in the last Annual Message of the President, that "the purpose of Revenue alone can justify their imposition;" and that the Revenue should be reduced "to the amount annually needed for the prudent and economical administration of public affairs."

This principle has been ably and elaborately supported, in various reports made to Congress by Secretary GUTHRIE; and it would probably have been incorporated in a new Tariff law at the last session, had not political schemes engrossed the attention of the House.

The principal features in the new Tariff will be a reclassification of raw materials, which will all be put upon the free list. WOOL must be admitted free of duty, as it is now admitted into England and France. The present Tariff (of 1857) imposes a duty of thirty per cent. on wool, which, it is claimed, has entirely destroyed the manufacture of fine woolen goods in this country, has glutted our market with foreign fabrics, and has driven our wool-growers to more profitable occupations.

Secretary GUTHRIE's Report to Congress in 1854 claims that the woolen fabrics used annually in the United States contain 200,000,000 pounds of wool; of which, in 1853, 60,000,000 pounds were raised in this country, 21,000,000 pounds were imported in a raw state, and 119,000,000 pounds imported in manufactured goods! If wool be admitted FREE of duty, a large portion of this 119,000,000 pounds would be brought here, in its natural state, to be manufactured; and this portion would increase yearly, as our manufacturers become more firmly established. The question to be settled by the Tariff is—whether this 119,000,000 pounds of wool shall be annually imported in its raw state, or in manufactured goods.

SUGAR must also be admitted free of duty. The duty is now thirty per cent., and Sugar is so enormously high in our markets, that the poor man can hardly afford to use it. There is no reason why Sugar should be taxed. It is a necessity of daily life. Our Sugar Cane is an exotic plant, belonging to a tropical soil, and it cannot be cultivated to any extent in this country. There is no home production of Sugar of any account; the early Winters, the rains and frosts of our climate destroy the Cane and fatal to its juices to ripen. But, for the benefit of 2,661 Sugar-Planters in the remote Southern States, who have just received a charity of $75,000 from Government, we are taxed $40 on every $100 worth of Sugar brought into the country. We are glad to see that the Sugar tax is [illegible]. If the necessity of its abolition [illegible] pressed upon Congress, it may [illegible] at eight cents

[illegible]

An attempt will be made at this session to induce Congress to refund the thirty per cent. duty which has been paid on all Railroad iron imported into the country during the past ten years! This is the most brazen scheme for plundering the Treasury that has been broached of late. We cannot believe that any Congress will have the impudence to legalize such a robbery. If the duties paid on imported Railroad iron are to be refunded to these Corporations, then an equal sum must be paid from the Federal Treasury, as bounties, to other Corporations, who have built their roads of American iron. Indeed, there will be no end to the procession of beggars that will besiege the Treasury door for all kinds of charities, should this absurd measure become a law.

Obstacles to Municipal Reform.

We regret to perceive that an effort is already being made to defeat the wishes of the intelligent portion of the citizens of New-York, with respect to reform in the administration of our Municipal Government. Passion and party feeling are appealed to, instead of common sense and justice, to govern the action of the State Legislature in providing for the wants of nearly a million of people.

Nearly every evil, under which the City of New-York suffers, is directly traceable to the division of power which exists, as a consequence of the election of the heads of departments by the people. It is true that the classification of departments is, also, preposterous and absurd; but rottenness, fraud, and wholesale robbery, are not the necessary corollaries of such an arrangement. Selahs, Fureys, Purdys, Ebbings, Irvings, et id genus omne, are not dishonest, because their duties interfere with each other; but because they are responsible to no common head; because no one can remove them; because no indictment can reach them; because no exposure can shame them; because no amount of popular indignation can frighten them; and because they can snap their fingers with impunity in the faces of those whom they have robbed. Until ample power is invested in some one to redress grievances, punish evil doers, and remove the inefficient or unworthy, not the advance of a hair's breadth will have been made towards the attainment of a better government. The appeals, therefore, that are made to the incoming State Legislature, to shrink from applying the needful remedy, from such minor considerations as personal jealousy, prejudice against any one individual, or fear of too great a concentration of power, are an insult to the intelligence, wisdom and integrity of that body. The charters which, within a few years, have rapidly succeeded each other, have all proved a curse to the City, because political antipathies or preferences have held sway in framing them.

The Tribune, of last Thursday, contains the following proposition:

"Let the Mayor be the head of the department of police, public health, licenses, markets and general supervision. The Comptroller the head of the finance department, with such bureaus as assessments, taxation and collection and law. Put the draining, cleansing and lighting of streets & the Croton or water department. Let new streets, paving, repairing, docks, public buildings and general repairs be the work of a street department. Then, with the present organization of education, Alms House and Fire Departments, we might have something like a compact government. The elective heads would be the Mayor, Comptroller, Water Commissioner, Street Commissioner, and Governors of the Alms House."

We confess our inability to see in this the faintest approach towards anything like reform in the administration of our City affairs. On the contrary, the scheme thus set forth seems, on the face of it, to have been devised for the express purpose of obtaining the highest degree of impunity for plunderers, and paralyzing every endeavor to clog the wheels of corruption. The Tribune proposes to quadruple the patronage of the Finance Department, which is already so monstrous that, with the connivance of such rogues as govern the other Departments, it could swindle the City to almost any amount. It would multiply together the abominations of the City Inspector's Department, the Street Commissioner's Department, and the Department of Streets and Lamps, and saddle tax-payers with the entire product. It would make permanently independent corporations of the Croton and Almshouse Departments, and enable them, if so disposed, to emulate, successfully, the criminal career of their colleagues. It would reduce the Mayor to a nonentity—a sort of municipal Magog—which would make his office an incumbrance to the City and a nuisance to himself. It would retain the most infamous features of the present abominable system, and destroy even the show of unity that remains.

Lack of responsibility is the radical defect of our present system. While it continues, there is no possibility of reform. Any improvement in our condition must commence by remedying this, the grand fundamental evil which gives impunity to all the rest.

NOT SO BAD AS IT SEEMS.—The Commercial Advertiser is very severe upon "certain newspapers," which its dignity prevents it from designating, for an alleged change of tone concerning Gov. GEARY's proceedings in Kansas. It claims to have always maintained that the Courts of law were the tribunals to which the people of Kansas should apply for redress of grievances,—and represents the "certain newspaper" aforesaid as having at last come to the same ground.

The Commercial is not half as stupid as it affects to be. The TIMES says that if the President will remove Judge LECOMPTE and put an honest man in his place, the people of Kansas will refer their grievances to his Court. The Commercial has always insisted, and does still insist, that the Court, with Judge Lecompte on the Bench, is the proper tribunal to which popular complaints should be referred. It professes to regard these two positions as identical:—but it only makes believe. It knows better.

The spirit shown by Gov. GEARY in ordering the arrest and rearrest of HAYES, the murderer of BUFORD,—his indignation upon learning that he had been bailed out by Judge LECOMPTE, with the connivance of Marshal DONALDSON,—and his threat to appeal to the President in the premises, are events of good omen. They show that his attention has at last been arrested by the open, shameless disregard of all law and all justice by the Federal Judges and other office-holders of the Territory;—and that he feels the impossibility of preserving peace there while this state of things continues.

If he maintains throughout the resolution he has thus evinced, he will bring the radical evil of the Territory to the attention of the President in such a shape as must command his re-

[illegible] to [illegible] Kansas he will have taken the first and most essential step towards the pacification and civilization of the Territory. For when they can be secured of justice there, the people of Kansas will cease to the Courts for redress and for protection. Thus far those Courts have been mere tools in the hands of their oppressors. Going to them was simply putting their feet into the fetters prepared for them.

DRESS AND THE DRAMA.—Few cities can boast of more chaste and elegant places of amusement than this, the Metropolis of the Western World. They are numerous, orderly, and, as a rule, well conducted. Foreigners who do us the distinguished honor of visiting our Opera, say that it is the handsomest building in the World, and the ladies maintain—to the disgust of the gentlemen—that it possesses the handsomest tenor—but this is absurd. Our theatres are remarkable for the graceful air of elegance which prevails in them. They are nationally clean and wholesome; with spacious seats, lofty ceilings and floods of light—which Mr. EMERSON says makes all things beautiful. Without any of the stiff-necked pretension of English fashionable places of amusement, they have all the easy grace and polish of the most aristocratic. Our audiences are the quietest and most mannerly to be found in the States—with the slightest possible weakness for spitting, and no viciousness towards bad actors. They are Promethean in their power of endurance, and would sooner be carried out dark and stiff than utter an unwelcome hiss.

All these things impress the charitable mind in a highly favorable way, but the prying eyes of the moralist wander from the stage sometimes, and see things which it is not fit should be seen within the walls of a theatre. He is astounded, and we may add disgusted, to find that every theatre is nothing more or less than a huge grog shop; that the "bar," with all its glittering appurtenances, is one of the principal features of the establishment, and so recognized by the manager. At the Academy of Music—a building devoted to the purest of all entertainments—matters are even a little worse. A low German restaurant is the convivial feature of that aristocratic edifice. The votaries of the divine art do not sip nectar, but guzzle beer between the acts.

Of late these matters have become obtrusively unpleasant. We do not recognize the need of a bar-room in any place of rational amusement, but least of all should it be openly tolerated. There are, without doubt, some helpless wretches who consider an evening misspent that is not progressive towards inebriation, and who are glad of any opportunity of sharpening their dull faculties on the potent edge of alcohol. But are these the men to be consulted by managers of our theatres? Is it necessary for the well being of art that their foul breath should be fed from the fountain of the management? Is it pleasant for the moderate, the orderly, the cleanly, the larger portion of the audience to be edged and elbowed by intoxicate beings who look on a drink as the natural denouement of each act, and who thirst for it all the more eagerly because it is within their grasp?

This is a matter that needs reform.

THE SLAVE-TRADE IN BOSTON.—Several arrests, it will be seen, have been made in Boston, of persons suspected of being engaged in fitting out slavers from that port. We are glad that the General Government seems inclined to exercise greater vigilance in regard to this nefarious traffic, than it has put forth for the last few years. There has probably been no time within the last ten years, when large numbers of vessels were not annually fitted out in Baltimore and New-York, for the slave-trade on the Coast of Africa. Sundry attempts at prosecution have been made, but in only one or two instances have there been any convictions, and in not one, we believe, has there been any punishment of the guilty parties.

Much of the impunity which this trade has thus enjoyed, is due unquestionably to the manner in which it is carried on. The active agents in it are of course the most unscrupulous scoundrels in the world—mainly Portuguese or Spaniards, and nothing in the way of false pretences is ever left undone by them which can aid in baffling inquiry. The vessels are fitted out for other kinds of traffic, crews are shipped for other ports, and all traces of their real purpose are, so far as possible, hidden from sight. The enormous profits of the traffic stimulate avarice, and lead men to undertake the most desperate enterprises, and incur any amount of risk in their prosecution.

It was suggested a day or two since, by the Journal of Commerce, that something might be done to break up this trade, by a law requiring the crews of all vessels fitted out for the Coast of Africa, to be Americans. This would exclude from that service the only class of men who are ever found willing to engage in the Slave-trade, and would thus deprive that infamous traffic of the agents by which alone it can be carried on. Legitimate commerce with that quarter of the world might complain of the restraints thus put upon it, but it could afford to bear it, in consideration of the important end to be secured.

The suggestion seems to us eminently practical and worthy of attention. We hope Congress will make this matter a subject of inquiry. Some new legislation is imperatively required by the honor of the country and the dictates of humanity.

REOPENING OF THE AFRICAN SLAVE-TRADE.—Among the comments on the Message of Governor ADAMS, in favor of reopening the African Slave-Trade, which we have extracted from the Southern press, will be found an article from the Charleston Mercury, strongly in favor of the measure. But the Mercury, even, has one objection to it; it says that if the trade were opened, the Yankees would monopolize the business, and reap all the profits from it at first. But even this objection is outweighed, in the opinion of the Mercury, by the consideration that the increase to the population of the South would all be for the benefit of that section. We are not sure but the Mercury is right as to the Yankees; if the business should be legalized they would be pretty sure of furnishing vessels for transporting the slaves cheaper than anybody else. The only member of the legislature who spoke decidedly against the proposition of Governor ADAMS was Mr. FREEMAN, a friend TRAPPER, who distinguished himself last Summer by the bitters and poems he wrote on the North. His brief residence here appears to have done him some good.

[illegible] O'CONNELL, who is said to be a relative of the great Agitator, recently addressed the Lord Mayor of London on the subject of the Guy Fawkes celebration on the 5th of November, remonstrating with his Lordship against the custom which has been in vogue two hundred and fifty years, of poking fun at Romish dignitaries on such occasions. Mr. O'CONNELL said to the Lord Mayor of the greatest and most favored city of the earth:

"I have read with great satisfaction your admirable decisions during your year of office, and I must be permitted to say, without flattery or sycophancy, that if the ashes of the great LYCURGUS could be collected from the briny waves, and formed into man again, and he were to preside in the chair which your Lordship so worthily and so honorably occupies, he could not have acted with greater ability or more decided impartiality than have characterized the whole of your actions during your mayoralty."

But, this paragon of a Mayor, if so much like the Spartan lawgiver in his character, is as unlike him in his trappings as is our own civic chief magistrate. We find the following account of the gorgeous liveries of the successor of the Cockney Lycurgus in another English paper:

"The state liveries for the Lord Mayor elect, comprising garments for coachman, six footmen, and postillion, were yesterday exhibited at the establishment of the manufacturers. The livery coats are of bright green cloth, lined with white silk, deep gold lace adorns the centre of back, and within a braided bordering of gold cord is a decoration of embroidery; the pattern, a series of sprigs displaying the rose, shamrock, and thistle. The leaves and stems are worked in gold, but as a novelty, the delicate colors of the rose bud and full blown rose, as also the green bulb and pink shade of the thistle blossom, are tastefully introduced.

The badge for the shoulder imitates a shield, upon which are embroidered his Lordship's arms, a thistle within three stars, surmounted by a crusader's crested sword, arranged with another sword en pointe, and supported by the motto, "Fiat cordial opus." The vests and continuations are of white cassimere, with gold lace borderings. The postillion's jacket is in a similar style, but is more ornamented with embroidery, &c. The cloak for the Beadle of the Tower (his Lordship's ward) is of green cloth, adorned with gold lace.

The Lord Mayor elect having determined to revive an ancient portion of civic state, has appointed two youths as pages, or train-bearers, whose costumes, also manufactured by Messrs. NICOLL, consist of superfine scarlet cloth tunics, with gold lace collars and cuffs, and white trousers; and for each suit is a silk sash of royal blue, finished with gold fringe.

His Lordship's state hat is of rich black Genoa velvet, edged with ostrich feather trimming, while a plume of two feathers droop over the front. The cocked hat for coachmen and footmen are of fine beaver, with green ostrich feather trimming, surmounting a rich border of gold lace nearly three inches and from each peak is a pendant of gold bullion. The postillion's cap is composed of black velvet, the band and peak exhibit a richly embroidered gold decoration of the rose, shamrock, and thistle, corresponding with the livery coats.

WHICH KNOWS BEST?—Mr. E. GEORGE SQUIER, who is in England, writes to the London Times to convince the English people that President WALKER's decree repealing the old laws which abolished Slavery, is not designed to reestablish Slavery in Nicaragua. Mr. J. L. RICHMOND, who describes himself as Sub-Secretary of State in WALKER's Government, writes to Gov. MOREHEAD, of Ky., that the decree was intended to invite Southern gentlemen to emigrate thither with their slaves,—"the object being to invite slave-labor." Now which of these gentlemen is supposed to know the most on the subject?

This letter of Mr. RICHMOND, by the way, which we publish in another column, is a very curious and interesting document. It is an official appeal to the people of the South, on behalf of Nicaragua. It holds out all possible inducements for emigration, setting forth the advantages of soil, climate, &c., and dwelling with special emphasis on the fact that five or six millions of dollars worth of landed estates, belonging to the natives, have been confiscated by WALKER, and are to be sold to settlers from the United States. The temptation thus held out is of the same nature as that usually extended for the purpose of inducing men to embark in a piratical expedition.

DECIDEDLY HOPEFUL.—The editor of the Yonkers Examiner expresses the modest hope "to live to see New-York one of the best governed cities in the World." Our cotemporary of Yonkers has either a desire to live a long while, or else he has got what the Phrenologists would call, Hope—large. We would advise him, in the language of MARY HOWITT, to hope on, hope ever. But we shall not entertain any very sanguine expectations of the kind until we get a new City Charter, at least.

GOOD ADVICE FROM A GOOD QUARTER.—The Detroit Free Press, the special organ of Gen. CASS, reiterates its sharp condemnation of the whole Kansas policy of the Pierce Administration, and warns Mr. BUCHANAN against imitating its example and following in its footsteps. Advice from such a quarter is not only likely to be heeded, but it is not likely to be given without some previous assurance that it would be welcome.

A REQUEST.—The Washington Union credits to the TIMES a paragraph commenting upon something, in the Herald, concerning Rev. Mr. BEECHER. Will that paper be good enough to say that the paragraph in question never appeared in the TIMES, nor in any other paper for whose taste and sense of decency the TIMES desires in any degree to be held responsible.

Rev. Mr. ANTHON (son of the Rector of St. Marks) is prosecuting, with marked success, the new religious enterprise inaugurated for Friday evenings. The usual discourse was delivered last evening, being in answer to points suggested by members of the congregation, who had perused attentively the weekly schedule of queries. It is intended that each service shall take the form of a reply. The movement is attracting much attention from its novelty.

[illegible] Gen. PORTER, U. S. Army, [illegible] of the delivery of which, during the coming Winter, arrangements have been made by the Mercantile Library Association, took place last night in Dr. CHANCE's Church, before a large and highly intelligent audience. The lecturer was Hon. N. P. BANKS, Jr., Speaker of the House of Representatives—the subject, "The Commercial Age." The publication in the TIMES, a short time ago, of an abstract of the same lecture, supplied by our Boston correspondent, renders on this occasion a full report unnecessary.

Mr. BANKS began by saying, that in accepting an invitation to deliver an address introductory to the season's lectures, he had thought proper as a topic not unfitting the occasion which had drawn them together, representatives in part of the first commercial city on the American Continent, to present some general considerations indicating an expansion of commercial influences, and ideas, and interests, as the leading feature and characteristic of the new era upon which we were now incontestably entering, and which, in a future century of the scenes we were now passing through, might be regarded as the opening of the commercial age. Every age had its distinct idea and characteristic. Civilization marched on with steady pace, and the State now from the period of infancy to that of middle life, and sank again into the quietude of decrepit age. "In the youth of a State," says Lord BACON, "arms do flourish; in its middle life learning; then both arms and learning for a while; then in the declining age, mechanics arts and merchandise." This assumed not only regular periods in the existence he had noted, but also implied a certain decline and destruction. Whatever truth it might have as a philosophic analysis of the past it belonged to the young men of our time to determine that it should have no application to our own age, and especially that our success in mercantile and commercial industry should never symbolize the destruction of our forms of civilization.

Starting from this point as the basis of his observations and conclusions, Mr. BANKS proceeded to show that no people could have a deeper interest in the expansion of the idea that commercial success is necessary to national existence than the American people. The battle of the Revolution, he remarked, was fought rather to secure the independence of the colonies of Great Britain than to establish any great political principle. And the men who framed the Constitution were impelled from necessity, as we might well believe, looking to their history from the position we now occupied, to a compromise of conflicting and sectional interests. Thence he proceeded to consider some of the chief facts evincing the extraordinary influences of the United States in their infantile condition on the Western World—not the least of which was the stand at one time taken by England, in pursuance of the principles maintained by American statesmen, in favor of the restoration of the Hanseatic League. He traced at considerable length the growth of the Federal and republican parties, as bearing on the question of the commercial welfare of the Union, and vindicated HAMILTON from the vulgar charge of having entertained monarchical proclivities. After dwelling on the facilities and advantages for commercial greatness which the position of the North American Continent, relatively to that of the other great divisions of the globe, gave to the American people, he referred briefly to the internal resources of the country, for the development of which he trusted to the current of trade, that would inevitably be diverted into it, in the event of the construction of a Pacific Railroad. He closed his address with a very eloquent appeal to the young men of this generation, in behalf of commercial integrity and enterprise.

Dr. Oliver W. Holmes on the Lyrical Passion.

Last evening, the Athenæum was crowded to hear a lecture on the "Lyrical Passion," from OLIVER W. HOLMES, M.D., of Boston. The Doctor commenced with some interesting illustrations derivable from the early life of FRANKLIN. He spoke of the irrestible feeling inherent in humanity to utter its impulses in verse. He told how little BENJAMIN, when a boy, peddled ballads founded upon some passing local disaster,—how people are not contented with facts, but require them to be presented in poetical and dramatic dress—how from Ilium to Chariot, and later still, how POPE and SOUTHEY achieved an illustrious failure over Hougomont, and how BYRON in a few imperishable stanzas, had linked his name with Waterloo. He maintained that to all human beings there attaches somewhat of the poetical feeling, and that the reason why when excited men write or speak in verse, and more or less poetically, is that under its color, men can lay open the depths of the soul as they never could in cold, tame, prosaic language, and do it too with less sensibility to shame. Beauty, when laudered, is said to be adorned the most, but even beauty, when decked in fitting dress and jewels will expose its naked glistening shoulder to the glitter of the ball-room chandeliers, and thus it is that in the utterance of good poetry, we flatter the love of the beautiful in all who listen.

The Doctor then favored his audience with a sketch of the history of Rouget, who, in one night, wrote the music and the words of the "Marseillaise," the only thing in fact that he ever did. He told how the wildest excesses were perpetrated under the inspiration of the burning stanzas of this lyrical song. He alluded to General WOLFE, to his well-known composition, to his eager admiration of GRAY's elegy to have written which WOLFE declared he would gladly have given his life. He spoke of another namesake of the poet-hero, CHARLES WOLFE, the regimental curate who wrote the monody of Sir JOHN MOORE, the only thing he ever wrote, but imperishable as the English language. Who knew much about Lady ANNE BARNARD, the gifted authoress of another solitary gem, "Auld Robin Gray?" Or even of her who wrote

"I love to steal awhile away
From every cumbering care."

Even though these have become with us familiar as household words? The feeling that prompted such isolated yet beautiful effusions, was an exceptional state of mental exultation in the dispensation of which the Divine Being had been no respecter of persons. In fact, it was a true inspiration, founded upon scenes and positions in which unexpectedly placed, the human mind develops a prodigious amount of sudden activity. To this cause might be attributed the fact that upon a scrap of waste paper partly on ship-board, partly in a boat, the highly-wrought mind of the writer threw off the well-known composition "the Star Spangled Banner" and then sank to rest again. The speaker told the story of the siege, and the elevation of the American flag as described by anxious eyes in the gray of the breaking morn, very graphically.

Dr. HOLMES then recited four compositions of his own. The first three were exquisite and brief. The last was a lyrical ballad in four parts; the tale—very new certainly, but founded on fact of course—the seduction of a village beauty, by a "gentleman of high degree." She becomes his mistress; the scene changes from Massachusetts to Lisbon in 1755; she drags him from under the ruins produced by the earthquake; the aristocratic old lady mother objects to her son rewarding his mistress by marriage; relents; they afterwards live many years in this country and their residence is yet standing. This is all very dramatic, certainly, but the Doctor's recitation of half an hour's worth of ballad-metre, was anything but dramatic; his verse, whatever be its merits or demerits, is far better than his elocution. His recitation of the shorter bits was not so monotonous. The audience evidently thought the ballad a "leetle" long, but upon the whole were in very good humor.

What the Catholic Fair Netted.

Blessed be the man who invented Fairs as the method of raising money for charitable purposes. They so delight visitors, and comfort the managers, and raise the wind without anybody's cracking his cheeks. For instance, one visiting the Crystal Palace during the late Fair for the benefit of St. Vincent's Hospital in Eleventh-street, would have thought all hands were having a frolic; yet the results count up a total of some $62,000. Each church contributing had its bazaar, which was recognized as its own, and no little generous rivalry was exerted to surpass in the amount of receipts. As may be seen below, it was not always the richest church that did best here.

Sixteenth-street (St. Xavier's) Church took	$6,357 57
St. Mary's Church	1,700 00
St. John the Evangelist	1,080 90
St. Columbia Church	750 00
St. Bridget	3,400 00
St. Peter's	2,445 10
St. Patrick's	2,850 00
St. Stephen's (Dr. Cumming's)	636 85
Transfiguration	2,002 81
Mt. St. Vincent	1,484 81
St. Vincent de Paul	873 28
Holy †	1,120 82
St. Ann's	2,220 50
Nativity	1,528 50
St. Andrew's	1,000 00
St. James	1,035 75
St. Joseph	1,701 00

The proceeds of payments at the door, after paying all expenses, left a balance of $2,210 21. For refreshments the receipts were $175 45. Donation from Third-street Church, $250. Donation from Mrs. Morr, (a Protestant,) $250. No small portion of these various receipts, says our Catholic informant, came from Protestants.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

Forgery.

Francis J. Dunnigan, a Navy Yard employe, who was arrested and held to bail a few days since, to answer to an indictment upon a respectable female, was yesterday brought before Justice Sarrs, in Brooklyn, on a charge of perjury. It seems that a few days prior to the time he was arrested for keeping a house of ill fame, in the Seventh Ward, and he went to the Navy Yard at the same time that he owned the house in question. It has since been ascertained that he was not the property, and he was accordingly arraigned. Justice Sarrs committed him for examination.

Robbery of Stolen Goods.

Officer Oliver, and Officer Cheney, of the Second Police Precinct, Brooklyn, arrested a gang of youthful thieves, who were engaged in disposing of stolen goods. Yesterday morning, at about 2 o'clock, they arrested two women, named Mrs. Lowry, keeper of rum-holes, on Water-st., who, it seems, have been in the habit of receiving stolen goods from boys to assist, by purchasing the articles from them. A quantity of the stolen goods were found on their premises, and they were committed by Justice DAVID K. SARRS to answer.

Why Some Vessels Catch Fire—Inexcusable Conduct on the part of Shippers.

From the Cleveland Herald, Nov. 26.

The discharging of the cargo of the propeller St. [illegible], which went ashore some time since near Fairport, has brought some things to light, not very flattering to the honesty of Eastern shippers. The taking out of some of the goods has been done rather roughly and hasty, and in one instance what was shipped as "a nest of tubs," covered with sacking, caught fire. Upon tearing off the sacking, the "nest" was found to be two tubs filled with friction matches! One "case of rice" was so damaged that it came apart, and in it were concealed three kegs of powder. Kegs of powder were, upon examination, found stowed in other cases of rice, and matches among other goods.

[illegible] of the Western and the American Express Companies, who had personal knowledge of the facts and developments, informs us also that not long since a package of coffee was landed on his dock, [illegible] it came loose, and her load and three [illegible] made their appearance with the coffee. [illegible] found the powder in the city magazine, and [illegible] to the manufacturer; and he, not long after, wrote back to the shipper, and he had informed the New-York shipper, and he was replied to "that he would not ship powder any more in that way." Mr. Bump informed the merchant that he could have his coffee, powder and lead, but was unwilling the name of the New-York shipper, who had received no reply.

[illegible] a case of rice by mistake was carried by the steamer on her last trip and went back to Buffalo; it was there by accident discovered to contain the kegs of powder.

It will be remembered by our readers that the propeller Spaulding caught fire at her dock in Buffalo and burned up. The fire and the consequent destruction of many thousand dollars worth of vessel and cargo was caused doubtless by the meanness of some shipper, who wished to avoid a few cents extra freight and [illegible] by putting combustible substances in and among articles whose freight and insurance was less. Such delicacy is a crime recognized by law, as we know, and will be ferreted out, if possible, and punished. The man who will thus, for a few dollars, jeopardize the lives of our seamen and the safety of our vessels, warehouses, &c., richly deserves hanging.

How the Arrowsmith Hoax Came About.

The Savannah Republican has the following lot. [illegible] which purports to tell how Mr. ARROWSMITH came to be so prodigiously hoaxed:

MACON, Friday, Nov. 21, 1856.

Editor of the Savannah Republican.

SIR: I notice in your issue of yesterday, some editorial remarks and a copy of Mr. CUTLER's letter to the Leading Men, relative to the far-famed Railway fund hoax, lately published in that paper.

You ought, and I think will doubtless disclose the secret. I give you the facts, as I believe, the true solution of the whole mystery.

I, with all the Free States, Englandom, and perhaps many other, supposed it to be a genuine hoax, played off on Mr. Arrowsmith, as we are very well capable of [illegible] in Georgia, suspected one of the early [illegible] Advocate and Columbus Sun having a hand in it, and meeting him shortly after the appearance of the story in the American papers, accused him of my suspicions, when he stated to me that he had assumed on his hear in fabricating the story, and getting into conversation with an English-man who was passing over the route, on the subject of Southern affairs, and that was his effort.

The traveller repeated the gist of the story, which he gave him, without suspicion of the use that would be made of it, and you may imagine the astonishment at well founded, while it made its appearance by the time he arrived at his native home, as witnessed by the [illegible] of his friends, on his travels from Augusta on the 28th of August last.

Hoping that the matter will be satisfactorily cleared, I remain, dear sir, your obedient humble servant, [illegible]

P. S. My information is obtained on good agent was laid and I have not seen your statement in the newspaper particulars. Should you desire to do so, and furnish you with such further particulars as he may disclose.

Yours truly, JO.

Alleged Forgery of Mr. Smith's Signature.

The Canandaigua (N.Y.) Ontario Repository of the present week, first alludes to the arrest of Marvin Powers, the Ontario County nuisance, for extensive forgeries. Powers is now lying in jail, awaiting trial upon eight indictments for forgery. It is rumored that Powers has got the inside track of the law and those who have suffered by him. It is even asserted that offers have been made by parties whose names had been used, to discontinue prosecution upon the payment of a nominal sum. It is said that Powers refuses to pay a red cent, and feels quite confident that the forged paper may have been so cunningly executed, and the signature so well put on, that he will get off in all proceedings, both civil and criminal. The following is the statement of the Ontario Repository:

"We have hitherto omitted to notice the arrest and indictment of MARVIN POWERS, of Farmington, in Ontario County, for forgery, and we now advert to his operations, and the proceedings against him, chiefly for the purpose of correcting some of the very gross misrepresentations in regard to them, which are in circulation.

On the twelfth day of last September, Hon. E. DARWITS SMITH, a Justice of the Supreme Court, residing in the city of Rochester, issued a warrant for the apprehension of Powers for forgery, on which he was arrested and taken to that city on the following day, where he has since been confined in jail. The Grand Jury of Monroe County, that assembled shortly after the arrest of Powers, found eight indictments against him for forgery. We understand that there are forged notes, which he has used, on which a still larger number might be found. He has many relatives in Ontario County, some of whom are quite wealthy, but he has not yet been bailed.

Powers commenced using forged paper several years ago. He has been, from time to time, repeatedly detected, but has until recently escaped prosecution. The amount of forged paper which he has put off since he commenced using it, is very large. We have heard it estimated as high as a quarter of a million of dollars. At the time of his arrest there was forged paper in existence, on which he was sued, amounting to more than sixty-five thousand dollars. The forged names on the spurious paper that he has put off, are chiefly those of residents in Farmington, with those of some persons in Victor, and, we believe, in Canandaigua. Some fictitious names have also been used. Whether all that paper which POWERS has used has been forged by himself alone, or whether he has had assistance in the business of forging, we are unable to state.

For several years he has been carrying on farming and the milk business at Farmington, transporting his milk to Rochester on the railroad, and selling it there. He has done some business in buying and selling live stock; and he has represented much of the forged paper, on which he has obtained money, to have been received by him on the sale of such stock. At the time of his arrest, he owned about eleven hundred acres of land in Farmington and Canandaigua, consisting of adjoining farms and tracts, which was incumbered by mortgages and judgments to the amount of not quite one hundred thousand dollars. But these incumbrances do not constitute his entire indebtedness, which probably amounts to from one hundred and ten and one hundred and twenty thousand dollars.

All his property, both real and personal, unless he has some concealed which his creditors have not been able to discover, will not probably be sufficient to pay one-half of his debts; and they must lose by him not less than from sixty to seventy thousand dollars. The greater part of this loss will fall upon creditors from whom he has obtained money or other property on forged paper. POWERS is but thirty years old, and is a native of Farmington. For the present we forbear to enter into any further details of his operations, affairs and character, but we may do so at some future time. Among honest men, to whom the facts are known, we apprehend that there can be but one opinion concerning him and the fate he so richly merits."

OPENING OF THE GENESEE VALLEY CANAL.—We have mentioned the fact that this work, projected shortly after the completion of the Erie Canal, had been opened through to Olean. In the Olean Advertiser we find an account of the arrival of the first boat, which is not without its interest to those who know the history of the work. Judge MARVIN, an old friend of the enterprise, was on board, and was vehemently cheered. The Advertiser says: "The Judge began a reply to the congratulations of his townsmen and friends by saying, 'I thank Heaven that after thirty years of anxiety and labor, I stand on the deck of a canal boat in the village of Olean!' Casting his eye to the bow of the boat, he saw standing there, his form bent with the weight of years, and his hair silvered over with the frosts of many winters, DAVID BOWMAN, the only living representative then in view, who began the agitation of a canal from this village to Rochester."

THRESEMAR No. 3.—Is the great European remedy for that class of disorders which, unfortunately, the English physician treats with mercury to the inevitable destruction of the patient's constitution, and which all the Sarsaparilla in the world cannot remove.

THRESEMAR Nos. 1, 2, and 3, are prepared in the form of a lozenge, devoid of taste or smell, and can be carried in the waistcoat pocket. Sold in the cases and divided in separate doses, as administered by Valpeau, Lallemand, Roux, Ricord, &c., &c. Price $2 each, or four cases in one for $6, which saves $8; and in $27 cases, whereby there is a saving of $9.

Special arrangements having been made with the various Expresses, the nine-dollar cases of the Thresemar, and the larger sizes, will be forwarded by Dr. Barrow, carriage paid, immediately on receiving a remittance to any part of the world, securely packed, and addressed according to the instructions of the writer, thus securing to the public genuine European preparations, and effectually protecting them from spurious and pernicious imitations. The three-dollar cases sent as usual, but not free of carriage.

TO THE PUBLIC.—CONSUMPTION.—WATKINSON'S PULMONACILA, a safe, reliable family medicine, warranted not to contain one particle of mercury or any other mineral poison, not a drop of which has got up to sell and humbug the public. He has used it for years in private families of friends, and now at the urgent request of hundreds who have seen its remarkable cures where every other remedy has failed, he offers it to the public to benefit and relieve those suffering from that fatal disease so inherent to our changeable climate, carrying off its thousands to an early grave, Consumption. The discoverer of Pulmonacila is RICHARD WATKINSON, a gentleman of well-known standing in Philadelphia and New-York. WATKINSON.

RICORD'S PRACTICE.—DR. HAMMOND would inform the public that he may be consulted, confidentially, on all those important diseases which constitute his specialty, at his rooms No. 516 Broadway, opposite the St. Nicholas. Returning to this city in 1850 he established the "Ricord Office," a method of treatment which, from rapidity of cure and permanent safety to the constitution, had revolutionized medical science, in this class of maladies. Dr. HAMMOND'S success for the last six years has been unparalleled, so much so that numerous imitators have sprung up, who are as ignorant of medicine generally as they are of this important branch of it. Consultation free, in English or French, personally or by letter. In till 1 o'clock, and from 5 to 7 evenings. C. D. HAMMOND, M. D.

DR. MAGNIN'S LUCINA CORDIAL, OR ELIXIR OF LOVE.—This delightful and positive invigorant of the human system is that unprecedling all other remedies; in fact, when its virtues become fully known it will be the only remedy in use. Its action on the nervous system and reproductive organs is most extraordinary; allaying all over-excitement, and infusing into the nervous organization that degree of tension which is requisite to give the human system the enjoyment of its full powers, both mentally and physically. Manufactured it is equally remarkable in neutralizing with the gastric juices of the stomach, it insists them in more readily dissolving all nutritious substances, and converting them into pure and wholesome blood; thus the digestion is improved and the whole framework of man moves on in a more vigorous and harmonious manner thereby. Price, $2 per bottle, or two bottles for $3. Principal office, No. 67 Maiden-lane. DR. MAGNIN.

Office, No. 50 Canal-st., three doors east of Broadway.

PRIVATE CONSULTATIONS.—DR. WATSON has for a long series of years confined his attention to diseases of a certain class, to which he has treated not less than twenty thousand cases, without an instance of failure. The remedies are mild, and do not keep the patient from business, or expose him to detection. An immediate application should always be made; but if the disease has lain concealed in the system, or has spread, by injudicious treatment, the undersigned knows himself especially competent to treat such cases, by a method as once safe, speedy and effectual. Dr. WATSON is to consult at residence, from 7 in the morning until 9 at night, at his consulting rooms and residence, No. 55 Walker-st., a few doors west of Broadway. W. WATSON, M. D.,

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

A BAD FELLOW.

A young and straight-haired fellow, represented himself to be a Spaniard, and named Peter [illegible] was brought before Justice OSBORN yesterday, on a charge of stealing six revolving pistols from the store of Wm. H. Onion, of No. 66 Maiden-lane, on Thursday last. He went into Mr. Onion's store, it is alleged, under pretence of making some purchases, and while there managed to "lift" the six revolvers and put them in a capacious pocket. The property was missed immediately after he left. Information of the theft was given at the Chief's office, and officer Davoe, who took the matter in hand, discovering Costello on Thursday night at the corner of Hamilton and Market streets, took him into custody.

Costello was not disposed to surrender quietly. He drew a formidable dirk-knife upon the officer, but failing to find time to use it it was knocked out of his hand by a gentle tap of the "locust." The rascal then walked quietly along. On searching him a brass knuckle was found on his person. When brought to the Police Office he was very indignant, and turning to officer Davoe said, "My stiletto you." Justice Osborn heard him up for trial.

CHARGED WITH PERJURY.

A young manhattanese named Charles A. Edwards, was arrested by officer Sweeney, of the Lower Police Court, on a charge of willful perjury preferred against him by Michael Miller, who accused him of having, on the 5th of September last, sworn falsely before Justice Davies of the Supreme Court, as to his qualifications as bonsman bail for the future appearance of George J. Whitmore, a bankrupt debtor.

Edwards was taken before Justice OSBORN, who held him in the sum of $500 to answer at the Court of General Sessions.

TWO SCOUNDRELS CAUGHT.

On Thursday night, John Gill, of No. 214 Baxter-street, discovered two fellows cruelly beating a man in the street. He approached and remonstrated with them, whereupon they turned upon and stabbed him in the arm and thigh. The rascals then ran away, but were pursued and captured by some members of the Police. They gave their names as Smith and Brown, and were taken before Justice OSBORN, who committed them for trial.

The wounds inflicted upon Mr. Gill are not serious.

ARREST OF JOHN JONES.

We have announced within a week past the capture of two thieves, and his less distinguished friend and their instructor—the former for robbing a country gentleman, and the latter for picking a man's pocket of a pocket-book containing $70 at the Jersey City Ferry. Now we have to record the arrest of that other thief, John Jones. John was arrested and is charged with having stolen a pocket-book containing $70 worth of property, from Terrence Terrence swears that Jones caught him in a crowd, and, holding him fast, thrust his hand into his pocket, and took therefrom the property mentioned.

For this charge, the unfortunate John Jones was taken up by Justice Woop for a further hearing.

CAUGHT IN THE LOCK-UP.

A fallen angel, named Harriet McManus, was captured yesterday by Policeman Palmer, of the Fourth Ward, charged with taking too much money from Samuel Robbins, of No. 14 Hamersley-street, who says he lost $90, when it was understood his expenditure should amount to only $20, including the drinks. The alleged offence was committed at the resort No. 2 Catharine-lane, kept by a colored woman named Chloe.

The prisoner was taken before Justice Woon, of the Essex Market Police Court, who ordered her to be confined for a further investigation.

ON A CHARGE OF BURGLARY.

Thos. Cardwell, aged 19 years, was brought before Justice Osborn yesterday morning, charged with having the previous night entered the store of John Ryan, of No. 45 McDougal-street, by forcing open the door, and carried away a gold watch valued at $20, silver and copper coin to the amount of $20, and a knife.

The prisoner was detected through his own recklessness. On Thursday night he went into a drinking house in Thompson-street, being partially intoxicated, and became involved in the crowd to fight him. No sooner had he entered than he drew a knife, which he flourished about a minute, and then made a thrust of it at the barkeeper, Peter Bogart, of the Eighth Ward, was in the act of throwing himself upon the young desperado to the Station-house, when the clasp-knife was identified by Mr. Ryan as the one stolen from his store.

The prisoner is an old offender. He was committed to prison in default of $1,000 bail.

ARRESTED WITH AN AXE.

A robbery was attempted about 9 o'clock yesterday morning at No. 70 Baxter-street, between Thomas Hyland, the landlord of the place, and one Jacob Lewis, during which the former was struck on the head with an axe by the latter. The quarrel originated in a trifling matter.

The prisoner was arrested, and Justice OSBORN committed him in default of bail to answer the charge of intent to kill.

A WATCHMAN SHOT BY A THIEF.

James H. Hubbard, a private watchman, was shot Thursday night by a thief whom he detected in the act of cutting a rope from schooner Hygea, lying at the foot of pier No. 25 East River. Hubbard had a struggle with the thief and attempted to arrest him, when the latter was wrenched from him and fired at the watchman, the ball took effect in the fleshy part of his thigh. The thief succeeded in making his escape, but the wounded man was conveyed to his residence, No. 7 Oak-street, by a Seventh Ward watchman, who attended to his assistance by the discharge of the pistol. The wound is not regarded dangerous.

BRICK WORK.

Two prisoners were arrested yesterday morning by officer Gardner, of Cardinal-street, for picking a lady's pocket of a wallet containing $17. They were brought before Recorder Tallmadge, who gave them the extent of the law and six months on Blackwell's Island.

ARRESTED FOR EMBEZZLEMENT.

William Hampton, a clerk in the employ of Hutchings & Tiffany, Nos. 64 and 66 Broadway, was arrested yesterday morning on a charge of stealing cloth from his employers' house. Committed to meet the charge.

The Origin of Fires.

Scarcely people are aware of the origin of the many fires in this big City, since his appointment, Fire Marshal BAKER has rigidly investigated the cause of every fire occurring within the precincts of the City, and his record of such investigations is highly interesting and instructive; and if attentively read and understood will tend to increased watchfulness. From the Fire Marshal's record for the past month we make the following extracts:

A DISTRESSFUL WATCHMAN.

On the 3d October, the tobacco and snuff manufactory of S. H. LIEBENTHAL, No. 215 Washington-street, was found on fire.

From the investigation it appears that the private watchman, John CARBOLE, had absented himself from his place of business. The fire originated, as testified by the watchman, in the shed building, and then spread throughout the factory in process of erection. Had the watchman attended to his duty the fire would no doubt have been discovered and extinguished before it extended beyond the place of its origin.

CHILD PLAYING WITH MATCHES.

About half o'clock on Sunday morning, Oct. 5, a little boy playing with matches set fire to some clothing in a closet of the nursery in the dwelling house of Jeremy Rand, No. 190 West Fourteenth-street. The family were at breakfast at the time. Property to the amount of several hundred dollars was soon destroyed. The neglect of parents and nurses in leaving matches within the reach of children not only causes the loss of property but often the death of the child.

DANGER OF WOODEN SPIT-BOXES.

The embroidery store of MILLER & GRANT, No. 371 Broadway, was fired on the night of Oct. 7, 1856. The investigation showed that each of the firm were accustomed to make a cager just previous to leaving for the night, and that the spit-box into which the cigars of lighted cigars and paper were thrown, was made of wood and filled with saw-dust.

The fire originated under the cashier's desk and just where the spit-box stood.

DANGER OF SMOKE HOUSES.

On the 7th of October, the provision store of HARRISON & CO., Nos. 19 and 21 Peck-slip, was discovered on fire. From the investigation, it is evident that the fire originated from the smoke house in the rear part of the store. The flame forced itself through the floor, up the iron door, some most fell and ignited, and then fired the premises.

A NEGLECTFUL ENGINEER.

On the afternoon of Oct. 11, 1856, the cracker bakery of ISAAC MCGAY, together with three tenement buildings, were destroyed by fire. The investigation showed the fire to have its origin in front of the boiler. The engineer, it seems, had put on a lot of shavings, and not waiting to watch the back draft, went up stairs, and while absent, some lighted shavings were blown from the furnace doors, firing a pile of boxes at the foot of the hall. The flames instantly spread up the hall, firing the whole upper part of the building in an instant.

KEEP YOUR GAS TURNED OFF.

Between 4 and 5 o'clock on Saturday afternoon, Oct. 18, gas was found to have escaped in the parlor of house No. 141 Norfolk-street, occupied by THOS. RYAN. In searching for the leak, Mr. RYAN applied a piece of lighted paper around the chandelier, when an explosion took place, firing the premises and opening doors and windows in pieces. Mr. RYAN was also badly burnt. A button on the pipe had been left open, the whole upper part of the room being filled with gas, and on application of the lighted paper the explosion ensued.

CHILDREN OF MATURER IN THE BANKS OF CHILDREN.

A young child, daughter of S. R. ARMSTRONG, No. 19 [illegible] street, was missed, and while playing in the attic, set fire to the [illegible] in the attic, and fire to the [illegible] occasioned injury. It occurred [illegible]

[illegible] Oct. 20, between 9 and 10 o'clock at night, a [illegible] was discovered in the store of No. 48 Cortlandt-street, occupied by [illegible] Upon examination it was found that a stove-pipe hole had been left only partially covered, behind the partition, and that sparks or coals came through it from the range on the floor below, and fired the partition and building. Great danger is incurred from old flues, if they are not properly secured.

DESTROYED GAS-FITTINGS.

Between 1 and 2 o'clock, on Tuesday, Oct. 28, some gas-fitters from the New-York Gas Company in Centre-street, while putting a large service-pipe into the oyster cellar No. 44 Canal-street, inserted a 2½-inch pipe into a 3¼-inch service-pipe, stuffing the interstices with white lead and cement. In about half an hour after lighting up, the gas burst through the white lead, ignited, and fired the premises. There were several men at work on the job, and one at least seemed under the influence of liquor.

KEEP YOUR SKY-LIGHTS SAFE.

Oct. 29, between 1 and 2 o'clock in the morning, the gold and silver refinery of H. SOLOMON & CO., in West Fourteenth-street, near Eleventh-avenue, was discovered on fire. At the time it was supposed to be the work of an incendiary.

The investigation showed that the sky-light over the sweep room was left open, and that large sparks from DELAMATER'S factory, adjoining, often fall into the yard; also that, on the day previous to the fire, the engineer had made about a barrel of shavings, which were left on the floor, in range of the sky-light, when they closed up. The fire was first seen in the sweep room.

Missing—A Strange Circumstance!

A young Englishman, who has resided in this City for the past three years, has been missing for some days, under very strange circumstances.

When he landed here he was possessed of a considerable sum of money, given him by his father, with which to begin life in the New World. He very soon, however, entered into a life of dissipation, and continued in it until he had squandered away his entire possession. This event occurred but a few weeks ago, and since that time he has been greatly dispirited.

A few evenings since he took off his cloak—a new and expensive one, and handing it to a friend whom he met, said, "Here, I am going over to Brooklyn; keep this until I come back; I shan't want it." His friend, though a little surprised, took the cloak, and before he had time to remonstrate, the young Englishman had left, and has not since been heard from.

What makes the story more interesting is, the assertion that the missing young man was one of the intimate acquaintances of the young woman who committed suicide a few weeks since by jumping into the river from one of the boats of the South Ferry, and had such a romantic funeral. It seems very likely that "one more unfortunate" has gone.

Life in the Fourth Ward.

A man, named PATRICK KELLY, was, about 10½ o'clock on Thursday night, found lying in an insensible state on the sidewalk in front of No. 25 Roosevelt-street. BRIDGET KELLY, who represented herself to be his wife, was sitting by his side grossly intoxicated. Both were taken to the Station-house. Medical aid was sent for, but before it arrived the man, KELLY, had died.

Coroner CORNEY held an inquest upon the body. Mrs. KELLY said, in her evidence, that her husband was an intemperate man, and that for the past three weeks he had "gone it very hard;" that on Thursday she and her husband were turned out of her room, in the rear of No. 15 Roosevelt-street, for non-payment of rent. Having nowhere else to sleep, they forsook their apartment to seek lodgings at the Station-house, and while on their way to that place, they were met by a female acquaintance, who induced them to drink with her; she (the witness) knew no more about the affair.

The jury rendered a verdict of death from intemperance and exposure.

Died of Her Injuries.

An unknown colored woman, aged about 40 years, died Thursday at the Colored Home, from injuries received last Wednesday week at Harlem, by jumping from a New-Haven train while it was in rapid motion. In the fall her head came in violent contact with the ground embankment, and she was unable, up to the time of her death, to give any account of herself. It is surmised that, having got into the wrong train, and finding that it did not stop at Harlem, she ventured to leap from it in preference to being carried beyond her destination. The matter is now under investigation by Coroner GAMBLE. Deceased had on a calico gown, a light colored apron, and a straw bonnet, trimmed with white ribbon.

Rum's Doings.

An inquest was held yesterday at the Fourth Ward Station-house by Coroner CORNEY, upon the body of a man named ELIJAH CHACE, who came to his death by falling overboard from some vessel at the foot of pier No. 28, East River, while in a state of intoxication. He was taken out of the water alive, but his frame was so chilled that he died soon after being brought to the Station-house. Verdict accordingly. Deceased was a native of the United States, and aged 45 years. He was well known in the Fourth Ward, and was almost constantly under the influence of liquor.

Heavy Burglary in Broadway.

The fur store of Mr. PHILLIPS, No. 546 Broadway was entered by burglars on Thursday night, and robbed of between $3,000 and $5,000 worth of goods. The thieves effected an entrance by prying open the front door. They afterwards broke into the daguerreotype saloon of WILLIAM WATKINS, above stairs, and stole therefrom about $300 worth of property. They got away with their booty in safety.

Nothing has yet been heard of the thief who, on Wednesday night, broke into Mayor WOOD'S carriage-house, and made away with a quantity of harness, buffalo-robes, and a suit of livery belonging to the coachman. It is needless to say that the Police are after the daring fellow.

Found Hanging in a Stable.

The body of an unknown man was found hanging in a stable in One hundred and twentieth-street, near Harlem River, at an early hour yesterday morning. An inquest was held upon it by Coroner HILLS. No evidence as to the identity of the man was offered. A verdict of suicide by hanging was rendered. Deceased appeared to be about 45 years of age. He was plainly clad.

NO ADULTERATED SCHIEDAM!
NO "AROMATIC TRASH!"
NO OIL OF TURPENTINE!

The stringency of the British Excise laws and the Governmental supervision of the London Docks, whence are taken all the ingredients used in the distillation of MESSENGER'S LONDON CORDIAL GIN, render an adulteration of the article, or even the production of an inferior quality, a matter of impossibility. It has to come up to the Government standard, and if found wanting is condemned as contraband. Its purity and healthiness are thus guaranteed with an official stamp, which the Schiedam Gin neither has nor pretends to have. MESSENGER'S is the best Gin imported for medical use. Sold only in pint bottles at 50 cents, and quart bottles at $1 each, by all respectable druggists, and at the dépôt No. 58 Fulton-street.

The Gin Controversy—Answer to Mr. Adolphus Wolfe—Important Disclosures.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

In a communication from Mr. UDOLPHO WOLFE, published in your paper of Saturday last, we were called upon to deny, if we could, the fact that the sales of the so-called "London Gin" in the United States exceeded (perhaps a hundred fold) the importations as taken from the Custom-House Register. This we cannot do; on the contrary, we more than admit all that Mr. WOLFE states, and never should have entered into controversy on the subject, but that our reputation as merchants rendered it necessary that our transactions should stand in a correct light with the public.

We are known in this community as importers, to a large extent, of Brandies, &c., the article of London Gin being but an unimportant article in our trade. To an honorable competition we do not object, but that the public have been grossly imposed upon by parties palming upon them what was represented as London Gin we know, and so do the trade in general, as well as Mr. WOLFE. The following letter may give some light on the subject:

No. 48 CANAL-STREET, New-York.

JOS. A. SCOVILLE, Esq., Ed. N. Y. STATE REGISTER: I have read your articles on the subject of "London Cordial Gin," and feel it my duty, as one engaged in the liquor trade, to give you an item or two on the subject, by which you may be enabled to do the community a service, and prevent their using mixtures which in the end must result in death.

London Cordial Gin never was known in the United States, (save to Englishmen,) until Mr. CHARLES introduced it in 1851. He, in that year, commenced its importation, and to my certain knowledge it has been continued to this day by the firm of DE VENOGE & CHARLES, of which he subsequently became a member, and they are at this moment the only importers of London Cordial Gin sold in bottles.

The idea spread that they had sold large quantities, and had made money by their gin trade. This is not so, (and as I was their book-keeper at that time, I can give pretty correct information on the subject,) on account of the high price of London Cordial Gin in London, and the impossibility to compete in price with Holland gin or Schnapps, which does not cost half the money. It will cost five dollars and a half to get up a case of one dozen pure London Cordial Gin; it cannot be done for less money, and the public may rest assured that all London gin, professing to be imported at a less cost, or sold at less prices, is nothing more nor less than common alcohol reduced in strength and impregnated with poisonous materials, to give a flavor to imitate CHARLES' London Cordial Gin.

Since its introduction by Mr. CHARLES, no less than two persons have commenced putting up what they call "London Gin," which they sell to druggists and grocers at as low as $4. As I have above shown, it cannot be gin, and what must these druggists think of themselves, who sell these pernicious drugs? Their answer is that "it sells, and that is all they care about." And is this to be the criterion of men whose business places our very lives in their custody? Are they, because they gain one or two dollars more per dozen by selling this mixture as gin, to be allowed with impunity to poison a whole community? Can they conscientiously continue so to do—nay, dare they do so?

Messrs. DE VENOGE & CHARLES were frequently advised to adulterate their gin, to compete with those who were stealing their title and the money they had invested in introducing CHARLES' London Cordial Gin; but, as honorable business men, they always spurned the proposal, determined to deserve only success rather than gain it by such ends, confident that the poison circulated so industriously and profitably by their imitators would eventually prove the destruction of its concoctors, and that an outraged public would demand that vengeance against the perpetrators which such outrages merit. There is, if I mistake not, on the statute book of this State, a law which would reach the case, and if so, no time should be lost in ridding the community of its poisoners. If this cannot be done, the public—for its own security—should avoid the noxious mixtures sold as London Gin, by using only the original, and observing that what they purchase is CHARLES' London Cordial Gin, the purity and excellence of which has been attested by the veteran Dr. VALENTINE MOTT, and by numerous other physicians of high professional repute.

This may appear in the light of an advertisement for Messrs. DE VENOGE & CHARLES; it is not so intended—but be that as it may, it is at any rate a tribute which they honestly deserve, and I only hope it may serve as a warning voice to the American public.

Yours, CHARLES DUBOIS.

We propose that the entire matter be submitted to public investigation. Let us see how it is that Messenger & Co. can import one pipe of London Gin and Simpson Brothers not one drop, and yet that between them one hundred thousand cases of so-called "London Cordial Gin" have been distributed all over the country at prices varying slightly only from $4 a case.

No one can be more anxious for a public investigation than ourselves. Our books are open to it; our importations, purchases, and sales can be readily compared, and the immediate formation of a Committee for that purpose is imperatively demanded for the protection of the public as well as to fasten the guilt upon those to whom it properly belongs.

We should think it at all events a case of sufficient importance to attract the attention of the Legislature at the ensuing session.

When the excretions are small in size, and scanty, the pills should be used daily, moderately, until all is natural. Nature, in these cases, gives important warning, and the pills should be continued until her regularity is fully restored.

Death snatched the bud from Eden's bower,
Ere blushing it with grace of morning dew;
Nor handing on its fragrance to a flower,
To shield the flowret from his way.

Transplanted in the Spirit-land,
To bloom with angels forever!
Yet does a "heart weep" for the loving gift
Thus early taken from us.
